MAID SWEARS SHE SAW MRS. STOKES IN LOVE NEST

MAINE WIDOW SLAIN; COURT HOLDS MAN

Jefferson, Me., Oct. 11.—Fred L. Post of New London, Ct., was held today on suspicion as a result of the killing of Mrs. Sybil Estelle Hamilton, a widow of Rockland.

Mrs. Hamilton was shot while on an automobile ride with Post yesterday afternoon, between Waldoboro and Jefferson.

It was at first supposed she was shot by a stray bullet, in accordance with the story told by her companion, but an investigation resulted in the discovery of powder marks on her clothing, it was alleged, indicating that the shot was fired at close range.

Post, who claims she was struck by a stray bullet fired by some unseen person, is a marine engineer.

Charles Flanders, living near the scene of the shooting, told the police that Post informed him he had heard a shot and that Mrs. Hamilton, who was driving the car, lost control and collapsed.

Flanders accompanied Post to the place and saw the woman's body lying on the road. She was shot through the breast.

Post was employed as a special policeman at Rockland twenty years ago and at that time lived at a hotel conducted by Mrs. Hamilton and her husband. Post is 65. Mrs. Hamilton was 53.

INDICT 2 BROKERS IN PLOT TO RUIN STATE SENATOR

New York, Oct. 11.—An indictment alleging conspiracy against Robert M. Feely and S. A. Woodrow, stock brokers, and Alexander Green, private detective, was made public today when Judge Mancuso held them in $2500 bail each.

The indictment charged that the three conspired to deprive State Senator John A. Hastings of Brooklyn, of his good name and character; that they procured a wallet, had the initials "J A H stamped on it, and then had heroin and morphine placed in it with cards bearing the inscription "John A. Hastings, senator, Seventh District, Kings County," and the seal of the staff of New York.

About February 14, last, the indictment charges, the defendants caused the wallet to be placed in an Albany hotel room, shortly before occupied by Senator Hastings; the following day, the defendants sent letters to the chiefs of police of Troy and Albany complaining that Hastings had narcotics in his possession. Feely was arrested last night; Woodrow and Green today.

Another Negro Woman Tells of Seeing Accused Wife With Wallace

New York, Oct. 11. (I.N.S.)—W. E. D. Stokes produced another witness today in his suit for divorce from his pretty wife, Helen Elwood Stokes, forty years his junior, who testified that the young wife made frequent trips to the love nest alleged to have been maintained by Edgar T. Wallace, co-respondent in the case.

Lillian Paine, a negro housemaid who formerly had charge of Wallace's apartment, was the witness.

"I worked for Wallace for a long time," she said. "I went to work for him July 5, 1917, and quit in December.

"I saw Mrs. Stokes in Wallace's

WILSON NAMED IN 'GRAB' OF GERMAN DYE PATENTS

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 11.—President Wilson approved the sale of seized enemy dye and chemical patents to the Chemical Foundation, Inc., by the alien property custodian, counsel for the Foundation contended today in Federal Court, concluding his argument in the government's suit to set aside the sale.

The President confirmed the transaction, Attorney Isador J. Kerset said, by adopting the report of the sale by A. Mitchell Palmer as alien property custodian, by writing into the Treaty of Versailles a provision that Germany should indemnify its nationals for patents seized, and by his message to Congress in May, 1919, urging tariff protection for the domestic dye and chemical industry.

Mr. Kerset also argued that Francis P. Garvan had been appointed alien property custodian to carry out the transaction and that whatever Mr. Garvan did was at the orders of the President.

LYNN MAN DIES SUDDENLY PLANNING GOLDEN WEDDING

Lynn, Oct. 11.—It was the ambition of Enoch Gove's life to live until Thanksgiving Day so that he could celebrate his golden wedding anniversary with his white-haired wife and his children and grandchildren about them.

He was strong and it appeared that plans the family had been making since last Summer for the celebration would be consummated.

Today he died suddenly at his home in No. 90 Glenwood street.

Yesterday he had worked a full day as a shipper in a Lynn department store.

There are four children and seven grandchildren. Mr. Gove was seventy-one years old.

3 TO 5 CENT CUT IN GASOLINE PRICE

Independent gasoline companies are planning to cut the price of gasoline three or five cents.

This is an eleventh-hour result of an investigation of prices by the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life and consequent report of that body to the office of the Attorney-General.

The tentative date talked for the reduction going into effect is Sunday.

The gasoline probe followed the "gas" war starting in the West and rapidly spreading over the country, still leaving New England paying higher prices for gasoline than other sections of the country.

It was decided that gasoline is an essential of everyday life in the present stage of motordom, the commission investigating on that basis.

FLIER TRIES TO LAND PLANE IN CROWDED NEW YORK ST.

New York, Oct. 11.—Skimming over Riverside Drive at 70 miles an hour, Lieutenant Edwin Johnson of Mitchel Field today effected a partly successful landing on a New York city street, the first ever attempted.

One wing of his Sperry Messenger, the smallest machine in practical service, was crushed, however, and the propeller damaged when the plane swerved to the right near Grant's tomb and crashed into a lamp post.

The post protected from possible injury a number of the crowd of several thousand who lined the drive to watch the experiment. Johnson was uninjured, and said he had sent for parts which would permit him to fly home later today.

apartment, saw her come into the apartment with Wallace.

"I saw her go into the bedroom. Wallace was with her. They closed the door.

HAIRPINS IN BED.

"The next day I made the bed, and I found hairpins in the bed, and red hair in the comb and brush on the dresser.

"I saw her come there one day when Wallace didn't expect her, and I met her face to face and I recognized her."

This testimony was adduced on direct examination at the hands of Max Steuer, chief counsel for Stokes. As soon as the maid had told her story, Steuer turned her over to Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Mrs. Stokes, for cross-examination.

Mrs. A. S. Miller, mother of Mrs. Stokes, who created a hysterical scene in the court room yesterday was not present today. She was said to have broken down.

MORE SENSATIONS.

The day promised to be one of sensations, rivaling the scenes of yesterday's act of the drama, when Mrs. Arthur Scott Miller, mother of Mrs. Stokes, cried aloud a threat to kill Elmer Henshaw, Mrs. Stokes' former chauffeur, who swore to improper relations with his mistress, only to back-track on his statements when the woman accused arose in the courtroom and cried out that the witness was a liar.

Charles Erstein, Chicago attorney, who, with Samuel Untermyer is defending Mrs. Stokes, announced an appeal would be made to District Attorney Banton to open a Grand Jury inquiry in New York, seeking evidence of perjury and bribery in the trial.

Similar action is under way in Chicago, where Stokes, one of his attorneys, Daniel Nugent, and five witnesses in the case have been indicted, Erstein said.

CONFESSED TO BRIBE.

"We have secured an affidavit from Mrs. Nellie Bailey, mother of the negro pantry maid, Nell Rose Miller, who testified against Mrs. Stokes, that her daughter had confessed to her that she had been paid $1,000 by Stokes to get Mrs. Stokes as th woman she saw in the New York apartment of Edgar T. Wallace, the co-respondent in the case.

This sworn statement will be handed to Banton and a demand for immediate action made.

Untermyer exhibited another sworn statement from A. A. Wallace, brother of the man in the case, given in Booneville, Mo., in which a denial of the testimony of Mrs. Alice Mills and Miss Katherine Kraber, both of Kansas City, is made.

The two women testified they saw Helen Elwood (Mrs. Stokes) in the main street town of Runceton, Mo., in 1916. She was staying at the home of A. A. Wallace there, they said. Both testified she was accompanied by Edgar T. Wallace.

A. A. Wallace, in the sworn statement exhibited by Untermyer today, said:

"I never saw Helen Elwood in my life. She never visited my home. I do not know the woman."

Untermyer announced he would introduce this statement in the trial. In addition to these three witnesses, two others have testified.

TELLS OF "FRAMEUP."

That Mrs. Stokes tried to "frame" her husband in an effort to get divorce evidence was the testimony of Elmer Henshaw.

Under cross-examination Henshaw swore:

That Mrs. Stokes told him to "frame" the butler and cook and get somebody in Mr. Stokes' apartment so she could get the evidence.

That she called to tell him what price to give, but told him to get the money from Roland Miller, "a cousin or something."

That she made a mistake about the date on which she gave him a fifty dollar check, but that she sent him several from Denver.

That he "wouldn't swear" she had used the words "frame up" when talking about the agreement, but finally, that she didn't use the word bribe.

That he took money repeatedly from her, "but did absolutely nothing."

ADMITS TAKING MONEY.

Over and over he testified that he had taken this money from Mrs. Stokes and did "absolutely nothing" in return, and in the end replied "Yes" to Untermyer's question:

"And this includes everything you have to say with reference to this lady's improper conduct?"

The peak of excitement was reached when Attorney Samuel Untermyer was pressing the witness to know why, nearly a year after he quit his job in the Stokes' employ he wrote a letter of resignation to Mrs. Stokes. Henshaw leaned forward and put on his most ominous smile:

"Do you want me to tell you?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, I was very friendly with Mrs. Stokes."

"Do you mean to imply anything by that?"

"I mean just what I say."

"Do you mean to imply that there was something wrong between you?"

"Yes, I do."

WIFE LEAVES TO FEET.

Mrs. Stokes leaped to her feet and beat the table with her little fist. Small as she is, her little form held so much rage as to paralyze the whole courtroom and in a steady and direful voice, she cried:

"You lie! You lie! I'll kill you! You know you lie! Take that back, Mr. Untermyer, you make him take it back or I have a brother that will!"

Meantime Mrs. Miller, mother of Mrs. Stokes, was struggling with attendants who tried to keep her in her seat and quiet, crying out between her threats:

"My heart is dead. I have nothing to live for. It has taken him (Stokes) twelve years to make demone of a Christian family."

TRIAL PROCEEDS.

Justice Jeremiah T. Mahoney, presiding, ordered a recess, but Mrs. Stokes hotly protested. Untermyer put in:

"Your Honor, it would be most unfortunate to adjourn at this moment."

The court rejoined that he would allow the trial to proceed if order were restored, and Mrs. Miller panted hysterical promises to be quiet.

Untermyer took the witness:

"Did you mean to have the jury understand that you were guilty of misconduct with Mrs. Stokes?"

"No."

"That's all."

Mrs. Stokes again pounded the table and cried:

"Ask him what he means, then! Make him tell what he means!"

Untermyer persisted:

"YOU KNOW YOU LIE."

"Do you mean to tell the court and jury that the relations which existed between you and Mrs. Stokes were of an improper character?"

"Yes, they were."

Again from Mrs. Stokes:

"You know you lie! You're nothing but a cheap, lying chauffeur bought by my husband."

Again an uproar with Untermyer seeking to reassure both mother and daughter with "He'll take it back—he'll take it back," and Mrs. Stokes answering, "You bet he'll take it back," then bursting into angry weeping.

Here Henshaw paled and his cockiness fled. Untermyer insisted:

"Now you have implied that although there was no misconduct you were on intimate relations with Mrs. Stokes?"

CHAUFFEUR TELLS STORY.

"Yes."

"And that your relations were of an improper fashion?"

"Yes."

"Between what dates?"

"Between November, 1916, and February, 1917.

"Tell the jury all about it."

"Well, Mrs. Stokes came back to White Sulphur Springs and before she left New York, she sent me a telegram under no conditions to let the children get out of my sight as she was afraid they would be taken away. When she got there she took me to her room and told me she had had some trouble with Mr. Stokes and was going to take the children away and begin separation proceedings. Well, I was between two fires. But at the time I promised to work in her behalf to get evidence and if necessary to frame him and she was giving me money—"

REPLY DRAWS LAUGH.

"Well, but what about this improper conduct between you and Mrs. Stokes?"

"Well, I considered her trying to get her husband and paying me money for it was improper."

A cold "Oh!" from Untermyer, guffaws from the courtroom and laughs from the jury.

But Henshaw's day was not ended:

"Did you mean to have the jury infer that there had been affection between you and Mrs. Stokes?"

"No."

At this stage, a recess was called and Mrs. Stokes forcibly held her mother who was making after the chauffeur as he left the stand. To her lawyers who sought to hold her, Mrs. Stokes cried:

"You'd better let me handle her. She'll kill him."

Stokes Like a Stone as Wife Wept

By JOHN A. MOROSO.

New York, Oct. 11 (C.N.S.).—At the far end of a long table, remote from his counsel, in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, sits an old man, a rich old man, bullet scars marking his flesh under his rather slouchy apparel—not wounds of honor, but wounds made by enraged women cast aside. He is W. E. D. Stokes, owner of the Ansonia Hotel, breeder of fine horses.

He is suing his wife for a divorce after having sued her and lost his case a year ago. A new trial was made necessary because of a technicality of law.

Back of him a little woman with a pretty face under a soft, dark blue silk turban. Touches of dull-gold hair creep from under the silken folds. Her eyes seem at times as gray as the feather of a dove, but again they seem blue as May-time skies. She is half her husband's age.

Her dress is severely simple, a tailored dark blue skirt and jacket. She is fighting a mass of testimony aimed to destroy her character. She has children. Her mother sits in court back of the ruling separating her from the defendant.

On the bench Justice Mahoney, in black robes, a young man with dark hair, keen eyes and a firm, square jaw. In the jury box twelve average citizens, a pretty clean, whole, some looking lot.

NEVER WINKED AN EYE

At the bar two of the most astute lawyers in the State of New York, if not in the country, Max D. Steuer for Stokes; Samuel Untermyer for the little wife with the changing gray-blue eyes, more than once filled with a rain of bitter tears during the course of the day.

One would think that when there suddenly blurted from the lips of a witness Elmer Henshaw, who had been employed as chauffeur both for husband and wife a charge that the relations between the witness and the little woman who is defendant in the case had been improper that Stokes would have lifted his eyes at least in surprise or curiosity, for the charge did not come out on direct examination but on cross-examination, unexpectedly, gratuitously, throwing the courtroom into an uproar.

Not a line of Stokes' dark, saturnine contenance moved. He saw before him his wife jump to her feet, her tiny gloved hands clenched, her eyes wet with tears. He heard her cry out that it was a foul lie paid for by her husband that her brothers would defend her good name against such filth. He heard her sob bitterly and he saw her counsel press her back, struggling into her chair. He gazed at her as if she were but one of a thousand fallen leaves at his feet in his path.

If there was a heart that did not beat in protest against the spectacle it was that of the husband. If there was a soul that did not feel revulsion it was his.

LIKE MEPHISTOPHELES

The face of Stokes is singularly like that of the face of the exile of Doorn; long, marked with power mingled with dissipation, eyes keen and close together, prominent nose, eyebrows pointed upward, long, animal ears, high cheekbones, but narrow forehead. Little makeup and he could pose as Mephistopheles in "Faust."

His star witness in defamation twisted and squirmed for hours under cross-examination, and had been caught in a number of contradictions. Nothing disturbed his master.

"Do you mean to tell the jury that you were guilty of adultery with the defendant?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"Not adultery," replied the chauffeur, Elmer Henshaw.

"You meant to give the jury that understanding?"

He twisted out of his direct sworn statement by saying he did not mean his relations were improper in that way. Then he made the statement that he had been engaged by Mrs. Stokes to bribe the cook and butler of Stokes, take someone in his apartment, and frame him up. That, he thought, was an improper relation. But he admitted that he had taken money from her to do this dirty work and had never secured any evidence of any kind whatever for her. Nor had he tried.

"How much did that man, Stokes, pay you?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"Nothing," he replied.

"How much did he promise you?"

"I'll get only my wages."

Stokes was undisturbed.

WILD MAN IN AUTO SHOOTS AT COPS IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Oct. 11.—Two police men narrowly escaped death today when a man, apparently a maniac, drove through Providence in an unlighted automobile firing shots wildly from a revolver. He shot at Patrolman Arthur Doyle on the East Side. The bullet grazed the officer.

Three minutes later when Patrolman Kelly on Blackstone street, North End, signted to him to stop the driver turned the gun on him and blazed away twice. Both bullets lodged in a store window frame close to the patrolman. A general alarm was sent throughout the city.

DIVORCED HUB GIRL IN JUNE; WED PRINCESS IN OCTOBER

Waterbury, Ct., Oct. 11.—Theodora Lilley, son of the late Governor, and Mrs. George L. Lilley, and Countess Sylvia Brunati, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Drummond Page of New York, were married at the Plymouth Congregational Church parsonage, Milford.

Mr. Lilley was divorced by his former wife, who was Miss Ada May Dutton of Boston, on June 24, 1922.

Mr. and Mrs. Lilley sailed today for Europe on the steamship France for an extended visit.

GIRL ACCUSES BROTHER OF SUSPECT

Bernard Rubin of Warren street, Roxbury, brother of Isadore Rubin, identified by Patrolman McGillicuddy as one of the two bandits who shot him a few days ago was arrested by police today charged with being one of two men who attacked a girl.

The other man is William Grossman of Columbus avenue, Roxbury. Both are held on suspicion. Mary Jennings, 20 years old of Castle street, Waltham, charged the men with attacking her in Grossman's apartment after they had given her a drink. She is in the care of police of the Joy street station pending an appearance in Roxbury Court on Saturday.

SPANISH WAR VETS TO UNVEIL CANNON

A cannon captured by the 24th and 25th Regiments, U. S. Infantry at Santiago on July 2, 1898, will be unveiled tomorrow afternoon on the lawn in front of the west wing of the State House by the Spanish War Veterans' Association.

The cannon has been in storage in the State House since it was presented to the State by the government at the end of the Spanish War. The veterans' organization secured an appropriation of $1,500 for the mounting and placement of the cannon. It will be unveiled just before the parade of the Spanish War veterans tomorrow afternoon.

RAIL HEAD CALLS ST. PAUL A "FAILURE"

Richard Billings of New York, vice-president of the Boston & Maine, in speaking today at King's Chapel, berated St. Paul and said if he were alive today in New England, he would never be elected as a manager or president of a railroad.

"He was not an effective preacher. His letters were a dismal failure. He had a poor delivery and his thorn in the flesh, which bothered him much, was gout. He never won a battle for Christianity and cannot compare with St. Peter," he asserted.

COAL TRUCK 'QUAKES' SCARE VASSAR GIRLS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Severe earthquake shocks were registered today at Vassar College. So violent were the motions of the delicate seismograph that the girls and teachers feared nothing less than the end of the world was impending. When no news of disaster came, although the instrument continued to gyrate ominously, an investigation was made. It was discovered that the seismograph indicated a heavy earth tremor every time a coal truck passed the physics laboratory.

ASKS EXTENSION FOR TURK-CHESTER DEAL

London, Oct. 11.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople says Colonel E. Clayton-Kennedy, representing the Ottoman American Development Company, is reported in an Angora message to have asked the Turkish authorities for an extension of the time limit allowed for taking up the option on the Chester concession. The scheme of development for which the concession was granted, the dispatch adds, appears to be in a state of suspension.

LOVETT RESIGNS U. P. CHAIRMANSHIP

New York, Oct. 11.—On the advice of his physicians, Robert S. Lovett today resigned as chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific system. The resignation becomes effective January 1. Mr. Lovett will continue his association with the company.

RAPS COUNCIL AT CHARTER HEARING

Former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, Mayor Curley, Arthur D. Hill and George U. Crocker, at one time city treasurer of Boston addressed the special commission on the revision of the city charter today.

Mr. Hill favored a Greater Boston. If there could be as much activity in the "honorable profession of politics" as there is in attempting to make charter changes there would be a better class of men in the council and a generally improved city service, he said.

The political limits of the city are too restricted, he believes. Many people are interested in the city government who do not live in the city, but who are large taxpayers and reside in nearby cities and towns.

YOUTH FALLS OFF FISH PIER; SAVED

Salvatore Eridune, employed at No. 14 Fish Pier, dived into the harbor today and rescued a boy. A special officer at the Fish Pier questioned the lad in regard to the pilfering of a fish.

The boy was so frightened that he started to run away and ran off the edge of the pier. Eridune jumped in, grabbed the boy, and held him up until a ladder was lowered. As soon as the youngster landed on the pier again he ran away.

Southampton (L.N.S.).—General Harington, former British high commissioner at Constantinople, arrived home today, declaring British prestige was never so high in that quarter as at present.

FOUND GUILTY AFTER DOPE SALE TO COPS

Theodore Deutschan, who, police say, is a leader in Boston's dope traffic, was found guilty in Superior Court today of selling 500 grains of morphine. Sentence will be passed later. Deutschan was arrested by Inspector Caverly and Patrolmen Norton and Donovan at the Dudley street elevated terminal. Patrolman Norton purchased of him a can of morphine, in exchange for which he gave Deutschan marked bills.

KILLS MAN, SHOOTS WIFE, ENDS OWN LIFE

Danville, Va., Oct. 11.—William O. Williams, Danville business man, was killed and Mrs. Williams seriously wounded here by Ben. C. Coleman, member of a widely known family of Virginia, who then committed suicide.

The tragedy occurred in a private home, where all of the principals resided. While those present were at dinner a fusillade of pistol shots rang out and both Mr. and Mrs. Williams fell.

Coleman then walked upstairs, locked himself in and killed himself.

BODY OF DROWNED RAIL WORKER FOUND

Fellow employes found today the body of John Hyland, seventy-three years old, for many years a worker for the Narrow Gauge Railroad, floating near Orient Heights. Hyland lost his balance and fell overboard when reaching for a railroad tie in the water. He was recently given a position of storekeeper for the railroad. He lived at No. 470 Summer street, East Boston.

Tomorrow Is Columbus Day
The Giants Won
Do We Drag the Ether?
Six Cards Missing

Current Events

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company.

TOMORROW WILL BE COLUMBUS DAY. Remind your children of it, preach a short sermon about trying new things, new methods, not always sticking to the old. When Columbus landed, he thought he was in China.

Perhaps he discovered his mistake on learning that the Indians actually had bananas. In China they have none.

BY THE WAY, in the United States only 344,303 Indians are left alive. There are only two in the State of Delaware, seven in West Virginia. No wonder the Turks ask us, "What has become of your Indians?" when we criticize them for killing Armenians.

THE GIANTS won the first game of the World's Series yesterday by 5 to 4. That may not mean much to you, but it means a great deal to a hundred million other Americans.

IF YOUR TURN is more serious you will be interested in the experiment of Messrs. Michelson and Gale, who teach science to young men in the University of Chicago. They will test the Einstein theory with the aid of a two-foot tube as long as a city block. Those hundred million good baseball Americans haven't the faintest idea of what the Einstein theory is, or how you can test it with a tube two hundred feet long.

THE LEARNED MEN will try to answer this question: Does the earth, in its turning, drag the Ether around with it, or does the Ether remain immovable, while the earth revolves?

We know that the motion of the earth draws the air around with it, creating a steady, all-year eastward wind, six miles up.

BUT THE ETHER is not so easily tested. Science has not even proved that it actually exists. It's an hypothesis necessary to explain the power of gravitation.

A great philosopher, asked what thought of God, said: "I have need of that hypothesis." The same man would have defended the hypothesis of an imponderable ether as absolutely necessary. The human mind is strange.

MISS ELSIE BARTHEL, trained nurse, and educated, consulted a Negro Voodoo doctor. He gave her six cards fastened by a black pin, a charm "sure to bring your wandering lover." He killed her when she failed to pay him three hundred and ninety-five dollars.

THE SIX cards were missing from a pack in the murderer's house. That led to his conviction. When they showed him the scene of the crime in the glare of an automobile headlight, he confessed.

Superstition, disappointed affection and credulity led the woman to her death. Superstition forced the Negro's confession.

WE ARE NOT very far from that tall specimen of the Cro-Magnon race with a well shaped head, dug up in France the other day. Possibly that Cro-Magnon of 15,000 years ago was ahead of today's human average, in some respects.

PRIME MINISTER BRICE of Australia says the British must unite to fight our growing, dominating trade. The British Empire sells too much on America. He suggests a British imperial purchasing board, to control all buying for Britons and forbid any purchases in the United States of goods to be obtained anywhere in the British Empire.

AN INGENIOUS suggestion, it would prevent Great Britain buying a bushel of United States wheat if Canada had any for sale, or a pound of United States cotton if any British grower had failed to sell out.

DOLLARS TAKE the place of soldiers in our day. The real diplomat is the international salesman.

England, old and wise, may teach the United States the importance of encouraging business on the biggest scale, under proper supervision. Such business men as Mellon, Gary, Rockefeller, Doheny, Swift, Armour, Guggenheim, Baruch, Schwab will take care of any British combination if they have full swing.

IT IS enlightening to learn that Germany is the biggest buyer of American cotton, more than $72,000,000 worth in eight months. Germany is the heaviest foreign buyer of American copper, and pays hard American cash.

Where does she get it, with the mark slaughtered?

There are able men over there, with whom England and the rest of the world will have to deal as time passes.

HUB GIRL WINS VERDICT IN LOVE SUIT

MARIE SLAGEL
International News Real Photo

Boston girl who won $10,000 heart balm verdict from John R. Dewar, rich New Jersey shipbuilder, as the result of a shattered romance that began in a fashionable boarding school. Miss Slagel declares Dewar jilted her after their engagement and secretly married another girl. Recently Dewar inherited a $500,000 fortune from his father.

MISS SLAGEL IS GIVEN $10,000 HEART BALM

New York, Oct. 11.—Marie Slagel, Boston girl who sued John R. Dewar for $200,000 balm, was awarded $10,000 by a jury.

Miss Slagel told the jury that she and Dewar became engaged while they were students at a Pennsylvania seminary. She said Dewar broke the engagement to marry another girl.

A nervous breakdown, was the result of the broken engagement, according to the girl's mother, Mrs. May Wears, who testified she and her daughter nursed Dewar back to health after an illness, and Dewar pledged his love then.

Dewar admitted he and the girl were expelled from the seminary because of their intimacy and that he had accompanied her on petting parties. He was sued by Miss Slagel two days before inheriting $500,000.

The couple first met at a New York boarding school. During the World War, when Miss Slagel and her mother were living in Boston, Dewar, who was attached to the merchant marine, was nursed back to health.

IMPERIAL WIZARD TO VISIT MAINE KLAN

YOUTH TELLS OF GIRL'S SLAYING; IS ARRESTED

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—A charge of suspicion of murder was lodged against Ernest Faccenda today by detectives investigating his alleged admission that he saw Emma Dickson, fifteen-year-old Millville, N. J., High School girl, victim in the swamps along the Port Elizabeth Highway near her home at Bricksboro.

Faccenda has been held in bail as a material witness. It was after the return of Peter Sheller, a member of the "murder squad" of this city, from the scene of the crime that the more serious charge was lodged against the prisoner.

Faccenda, who is nineteen years old, admitted, according to the authorities, that he was a witness to the killing, but declined to supply additional details. He declared that he did not know the identity of the slayer. Detectives planned to question him further today.

Sheller said Faccenda told him he had seen the girl killed on September 17, a short distance from where her body was found five days later. "Further than that," said Sheller, "he refused to talk. He apparently knows who committed the crime, but is afraid to tell."

The day Miss Dickson is believed to have been killed, Faccenda, according to the authorities, told the foreman at a shipyard where he was employed that he had witnessed the murder of a girl on the way from his mother's home at Ellisburg, N. J., to Philadelphia. Believing the story had been invented as an excuse for reporting late for work, the foreman thought nothing more of the incident until Miss Dickson's body was found. He then reported it to the Philadelphia authorities.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND SUFFERS FROM COLD

Gloucester, Oct. 11.—John Hays Hammond, noted engineer, who has been ill for several days with a cold at his home, Lookout Hill, left his bed today. He has been in Gloucester since Sept. 24. Mr. Hammond declined the services of a physician in his illness.

COST DOWN COAL PRICE BOOSTED

New England Dealers Raise It 50 Cents a Ton While It Drops $2 Wholesale

New England coal dealers this week announced this gouge on the public:

An advance of 50 cents a ton in hard coal.

Today it was revealed by the Coal Trade Journal that hard coal is coming into the market in such quantities it has DROPPED TWO DOLLARS PER TON WHOLESALE.

Also that the New England and other domestic coal dealers sensing the situation brought about by mines working to capacity demanded a lower price in coal and got it after which they tacked on an advance to the public. The Coal Trade Journal said:

SLAP DOWNWARDS.

"Continued operation of the anthracite mines at full capacity and the arrival of 2,203 cars of hard coal and 3,869 cars of soft coal for eastern New York and New England in the week ended September 29 are bringing about a reduction in wholesale coal prices.

"Prices for soft coal continued to slip downward to $1.86 minimum a ton and $2.29 maximum, as compared with last year's averages of $2.96 and $4.67, immediately following the national strike.

"Prices for anthracite, in spite of the keen demand for domestic sizes, also receded. According to one authority, the retail coal trade, sensing the trend of prices, is asking the wholesale dealers for domestic size coal at $11.50 a ton. This is a drop of $2 over peak prices of two weeks ago."

Fifteen of the largest retail coal dealers in Massachusetts were requested today by the special joint committee of the House and Senate appointed to investigate the coal situation, to appear with their books and ledgers at a hearing in the State House at 2 p. m. next Thursday.

Members of the investigating committee wish to determine whether the recent boost in price of $1 a ton for coal is justified. They have asked coal dealers to arrive at the hearing prepared to tell prices they paid for coal at the mines, prices paid by customers and the margin of net profit.

HULTMAN TO ATTEND.

Eugene C. Hultman, emergency fuel commissioner and chairman of the Committee on the Necessaries of Life, accepted an invitation to be present at the hearing. He will be accompanied by his staff of experts who have been investigating the situation.

Attorney-General Jay Benton promised the joint investigating committee that he would send an assistant to the hearing to advise the committee in event that prosecution follows.

DRIVEN TO DOPE BY DECEIVER

Ex-Follies Girl, Former Wife of Young Fernald, Bares the Tragic Story of Her Life

Clare Russell, known to Broadway as Helene Frances and as Mrs. Hays Fernald, once the daughter-in-law of Bert M. Fernald, a former Governor of Maine and now United States Senator, is held in jail for using cocaine while on an "L" platform.

She has consented to bare the secrets of her battered soul, desperately hoping that the dramatic revelation of her own tragedy will prevent some young girl from following in her footsteps.

By HELENE FRENCH

From the highest to the lowest—that is how far I have fallen. From the most exclusive social circles to success in Broadway shows—in the "Follies" and in Shubert productions for seven years.

Then lower and lower, to the point where detectives accosted me, to the point where all my fine clothes were held in hotels, so that I was ashamed to ask for work, to the day I resorted in desperation to drugs (a habit I learned as an army officer's wife) and today in the Jefferson Market Jail.

How did it happen?

BLAMES ONE MAN

Several things helped, but one man started me on the road. He is one of the wealthiest young men in New York. He is married now, so I shall not call him "George"—which is not his real first name. I despise him now. Once I loved him. But I do not wish to injure his wife.

My mother died when I was quite young. If I could have gone to her for advice I'm sure I would be happy now. If young girls only realized how much their mothers can save them from—there would be no family quarrels.

My father was a stern old New Bedford sea captain. He was well-to-do then, and sent me to exclusive schools. It was when I was home on vacation from a university in Tennessee that I met Hays Fernald, of West Poland, Me. Mr. Fernald, Hays' father, was then the Governor of Maine, and is now United States Senator.

Hays was charming and polished. I, being a silly little girl of fifteen, was quite infatuated with his manabout-town air. He was thirty-four then—more than twice my age.

We were married. It didn't last long. We had nothing in common, and after I left him to go on the stage, we were divorced.

It was then that George came into my life.

FOLLOWED TO HOME

I was stopping at the Tuxedo Hotel with a girl friend. I was still young—young and unspoiled. I noticed him in a box, several nights. I was registered at the hotel as Mrs. Fernald. He followed me home one night and got up to my room by telling the clerk he was Mr. Fernald.

I didn't want to make a scene and thought he was drunk. Oh, it had only called for help that night and had him arrested.

He told me who he was. He made violent love to me and said he couldn't live without me. He promised me he would always treat me decently and take care of me. He said that for business reasons he was forced to marry the daughter of one of the wealthiest families in the world, but in a few years he would get a divorce and marry me.

Well, I believed him. What a fool I was. For two years he visited me. I lived in a $9 room. He didn't give me a nickel. Then, in 1917, after I was making a big success on the stage, he suddenly started given me gifts or more a week. He told me to buy a bungalow on Long Island and use the money for that and for the furniture. I did.

What days those were; I thought I never would be unhappy.

I was fooled. Parties in my honor were held night after night. I had two expensive automobiles that were presented to me. And I really believed George loved me and eventually would marry me.

Life was a song then. I never wore the same gown twice. My beau and clothes were made to order for me.

OFFERS TO DONATE HER HUSBAND TO RIVAL

MRS. COLEMAN NO. 1

JAMES W. COLEMAN

"Other woman can have him," declares first wife of Fall River man who is reported to have married beauty contest entrant. Latter is said to be a virtual prisoner in New York and her parents have asked police to find her.

BRIDE IS HELD PRISONER, HER MOTHER SAYS

Mrs. Ida Messier Coleman, young Fall River beauty contestant and Wife No. 2 in a strange love triangle, is being "held prisoner in New York."

The youthful bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Messier of No. 125 Eldora street, Fall River, have appealed to the New York police to rescue their daughter.

"I am being held a prisoner here. I want to come home, but he will not let me leave the house. I do not dare to give my address for fear I will be killed."

That was the message Mrs. Messier received from her daughter.

APPEAL TO POLICE

The parents hurried to New York. They searched high and low, but without success. Then they appealed to the New York police.

Mrs. Messier thinks her daughter is being held prisoner by her husband. He is James W. Coleman, forty-seven years old, a much-married caterer.

Meanwhile at her home on Allston street, Beacon Hill, Mrs. Margaret Berry Coleman, wife No. 1, declares:

"The other woman can have him."

WIFE NO. 1 STORY

Here is the story of Wife No. 1:

"First, I wish Jim and his 'new wife' all the luck in the world. But, frankly, I can't see why a seventeen-year-old girl should want a husband thirty years her senior. But she can have him and welcome. All I want from him is enough money to live on over until I can regain my health."

"Coleman and I were married in New York in November, 1918. I thought he was my ideal. He was so tall and strong and kind to me—at first.

"When we wed I had been engaged as a concert singer. Jim was manager of a hotel restaurant.

"Our happiness was short-lived, however, finally after many quarrels we parted. I gave up my singing—had no heart for the work, and obtained employment as dietitian in the Fox Hills Hospital, Staten Island, New York.

"Last June I came to Boston to visit a girl friend. While here I learned that Coleman was in Fall River, flight there and then I started to play detective.

"I learned that Joseph W. Cole man had been employed there. I was informed by the rushier that he had married and disappeared with his pretty wife last December after a difficulty over the finances of the catering company with which he was connected.

DANIEL N. GAGE DIES IN HARTFORD

Hartford, Oct. 11.—Daniel N. Gage, vice-president of the Aetna Life and Affiliated Companies, and a widely known insurance man, died today following an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. Gage had had a remarkable rise in the insurance world. Born in Massachusetts August 13, 1852, he was educated at Andover Academy and at Dartmouth College.

Shortly after his graduation he entered a Boston insurance office, where he gained knowledge of his chosen work before going to New York to become associated with the Aetna Indemnity Company of New York City as manager of the surety department, later becoming vice-president.

KICKS DOWN CELL DOOR AND FLEES

Store Robber, Caught by Citizen, Too Slippery for City Hall Avenue Cops

Another bedtime story:

Once upon a time the police of the City Hall avenue station captured a burglar.

His name was Harold.

Harold escaped.

Wasn't he a nice, bad burglar, children, to leave the police of the City Hall Avenue station, flat, like that?

It was bad enough a short time back for the City Hall Avenue sleuths under the command of Captain Skillings, known as "The Snipper," to nuff a burglar arrest at work nearby.

L. Max Werrick of Werrick Brothers, No. 15 School street finding a burglar in his innocuous shoppy establishment, decided not to take a chance on the police of the City Hall Avenue station, let a few steps away, so he captured the burglar single handed.

Then he called police, and they bravely captured the already captured burglar and marched him to the station house.

HIS NAME WAS HAROLD.

"My name is Harold Sumpter," said the captive.

"Is that so?" said the cops. Well, well, Harold, here's a nice quiet little packet, bedroom and bath for you to spend the night in, and they shoved him into a cold, cold cell.

Harold grew very thirsty as night wore on, as the newsboys might say. He asked the cops for a drink, but they were very tired or something and wouldn't give it to him.

A City Hall Avenue station cop refuses to be a bell hop for any guy named Harold. Harold, enraged that his repeated requests for service were ignored, said:

KICKS WAY TO FREEDOM.

"I'll embarrass you gentleman, wait and see."

Whereupon, with a terrific kick the cops says all Harold's, dislodged the cell door from its hinges.

Then he walked out and made his way to freedom.

The cops says one of their number, a Mr. Wrand, leaped at Harold and chased him desperately, but unless Harold is captured this cannot be verified and Harold's version to press was still as loose as ashes.

13 DIE AS TRAINS STRIKE TWO BUSSES

Akron, O., Oct. 11.—In a crash between a Cleveland & Pittsburgh passenger train of the Pennsylvania Railroad and a school bus at the New Milford crossing in Portage County, today, eight children were killed and several injured.

Williamsport, Pa., Oct. 11.—Five persons were killed and five others injured when a passenger train on the Elmira division of the Pennsylvania railroad struck the Williamsport-Trout run bus at the Hepburnville Crossing, near this city today.

The dead are: George P. Ault, sixty-five, South Williamsport; Sarah Hall, sixty-five, South Williamsport, and an unidentified woman.

$125,000 FUR ROBBERY; CROOKS USE TRUCKS

New York, Oct. 11.—Six thieves early today trucked $125,000 worth of baled furs from the warehouse of Frederick Huth & Co. on West 36th street.

While one robber stood over the night watchman with a pistol, his companion leisurely went through several floors of the warehouse, selecting the choicest furs in the stock and lowering them to the street entrance by elevator.

Three truckloads of the furs were removed.

The watchman was sitting on a loading platform of the warehouse, smoking his pipe, he said, when two men approached, covered him with pistols, and said:

"Remember that Rothenberg story holdup, where two guys was bumped off? Well, if you make a peep you'll go in the same direction." The result of a $18,000 daylight robbery in which a messenger and a bandit were killed.

The watchman then was locked in to a clerk's office, where he could hear the truck arriving and departing with the loot as the elevator was delivered from floor to floor.

POISONED LIQUOR KILLS 2,000 PERSONS IN U. S. IN ONE YEAR

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Reports from many cities show a total death toll of at least 2000 from poison liquor in the United States this year, Dr. Emil Hoelth, Commissioner Hundley declared in a statement today.

"Of the hundreds of samples of liquor analyzed in the laboratory of the Department of Health," said the statement, "it has been found that eight out of every ten submitted for analysis were poisonous."

THIEF WARNING SENT OUT TO COTTAGERS

Owners of Summer cottages and camps were warned to securely lock doors and windows at the close of th season by an order issued to the State police patrol today by Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote. He also advises removal of all valuables, as many breaks occurred last year along inland lakes and resorts.

Most of these are laid to local thieves. Unlocked cottages are an invitation to them, the commissioner holds.

DR. BANTING MAKES GREAT DISCOVERY

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 10.—Dr. F. G. Banting, discoverer of insulin, will within the next few weeks announce another discovery of even greater importance than the diabetes treatment, Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health fr. Ontario, announced at a dinner of medical men. Dr. Godfrey said he was not at liberty to divulge any further information, "but it is a marvelous thing," he added.

AGED COWBOY WINS LOVE OF SALEM GIRL

The romance of William Kennison that cracked when Lydia Miller of Danvers first beheld the unprepossessing sixty-year-old cowpuncher, who had wooed her by mail from Montana, has been repaired.

Lydia had expected a "Bill" Hart. She fled in consternation when she met the shabbily dressed and unshaven Kennison without a nickel in the overalls he wore.

But pity is akin to love. So that when kindly Salem folk interested themselves in the weather-beaten old broncho-buster's plight and played upon her sympathetic chord, she consented to seeing him.

And Kennison, who had been in the meanwhile provided with a job by his intercessors, proved that he was as persuasive with his tongue as he was with his pen. Lydia quickly found that she liked him fully as well as she did the dashing cowboy she had idealized from his letters.

Kennison may be sixty, but he moves as fast as "Bill" Hart does in drawing his two guns. His next step was to lead the blushing Miss Miller to the city clerk at Salem to file marriage intentions. Then he secured a waiver of the five-day law.

Now all that stays the wedding bells is the receipt of a certificate of Kennison's divorce, which he says he obtained in Highwood, Mon., three years ago. Miss Miller lives at No. 47 Forest street in Danvers, where she is now busily engaged in preparing for the marriage. She became acquainted with Kennison through a matrimonial newspaper about two years ago.

POLICE AT ALL ENTRANCES FOR 'BIG' HARVARD GAMES

Hereafter at all "big games" in the Harvard Stadium policemen will be stationed at all entrances.

This was decided today by Fred Moore, graduate manager of Harvard athletics, at a conference with District Attorney O'Brien. The district attorney complained of the use of State troops in the stadium. He told Mr. Moore that 'the law does not authorize such action and notified him that the Harvard management would be held responsible if any trouble arises at any of the games as the result of inadequate police protection.

Mr. Moore promised that soldiers without arms, would only be used as ushers in the wooden stands.

STRESEMANN AUTHORIZED TO DISSOLVE REICHSTAG

Berlin, Oct. 11 (I.N.S.).—The Reichstag today adjourned until Saturday, with the authorization law, conferring dictatorial powers upon the government, still unpassed.

Chancellor Stresemann declared that, if the law is not passed when the Reichstag reconvenes Saturday, he will proceed to make all decisions upon his own responsibility.

President Ebert authorized the Chancellor to dissolve the Reichstag in case the authorization bill fails to pass by the necessary two-thirds vote.

FEDERAL TAX DROPS 40 P. C. FROM HIGH MARK OF 1920

Federal per capita tax increased from $6.81 in 1913 to $32.49 in 1922. State and local per capita tax increased from $15.69 to $33.24.

Federal per capita tax reached its maximum in the fiscal year ended 1920, at $33.75. There has since been a shrinkage of $21.29 per capita, or about 40 per cent. Meanwhile, however, State and local taxes increased $2.36 per capita, or about 10 per cent.

From June 30, 1918, to June 30, 1922, Federal taxation decreased $4.15 per capita, while State and local tax increased $13.51.

SEATTLE UNIONS HEED A. F. OF L. WARNING

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 11.—The Seattle Central Labor Council has acceded to the thirty day ultimatum of the American Federation of Labor.

The Seattle body was warned that it would be expelled from the A. F. of L. if it did not abandon its radical policies and pledge itself to carry out the dictates of the national organization.

MRS. CABOT HEADS TUCKERMAN SCHOOL

Mrs. Ella Lyman Cabot, wife of Dr. Richard C. Cabot, a member of the State Board of Education, has been elected president of the Tuckerman School of Home Making, Boston. She is the first vice-president of the National Religious Education Association.

Mrs. R. C. Cabot

"There is nothing that means so much to every community as the religious education of youth, and I want to have a hand in this noble endeavor," Mrs. Cabot says.

MANY FLEE FIRE IN BEVERLY

Beverly, Oct. 11.—Fire today in a junk shop on Water street owned by Walter McAdams, threatened several homes before it was controlled by the local department under Chief Robert H. Grant.

Occupants of the homes moved their household belongings out of the houses to places of safety as a brisk west wind began to rise.

The junk shop, a story and a half structure, was filled with old rubber tires that made a slow burning fire and a vast smudge.

Car Works Burned

SUNKEN TUG ONCE WAS STEVENSON'S

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 11.—The tug Equator, which sank at the mouth of the Quillayute River, once was the floating home of Robert Louis Stevenson, the famous author. It was recalled on the waterfront here. In the Equator he cruised the South Seas and on the deck of the vessel much of the material which went into his adventure stories was gathered. The vessel in those days was a schooner.

Double Package — Double Sealed

Good! Better! Best!

These three little words are Life's stepping-stones. We find first that which is good. Then that which is better. Then that which is best. And Experience is our taskmaster. If everybody had been satisfied with the coffee he had been using these many years ago when we first put White House Coffee on the market, White House Coffee would still be unknown.

Thousands of our customers grew to White House Coffee by experience. They found it and appreciated it after they had tried others. It is unnecessary to say it is the best coffee in the world—but we do say you cannot buy better coffee at any price.

White House Coffee is the choicest coffee grown on the world's finest plantations. It comes to you fresh, fragrant and delicious, doubly sealed and doubly packed, in the famous White House package.

$15,000 LOSS IN N. H. INN FIRE

Salem, N. H., Oct. 11 (I.N.S.).—Four horses, four cows, a mule and other livestock, including pigs and poultry, were burned to death today when fire destroyed the Fairmount hotel, barn and sheds of George Morgan on the Lawrence-Canobie Lake road. Help was summoned from Methuen.

A touring car and many bushels of potatoes also were destroyed. One of the guests at the hotel complained that she lost a jewel valued at several hundred dollars.

J. E. Richardson, a Methuen fireman, on the way to the scene in his auto, crashed into a farm wagon, killing the horse. Everet Mills and Sam Taylor were slightly injured when hurled from the wagon.

The fire started in a potato shed from spontaneous combustion. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

BARLING BOMBER RESUMES FLIGHT

FOOD QUERY DEPARTMENT

YOUR FOOD PURCHASING DIFFICULTIES SOLVED

Are you at a loss as to where you can secure some particular brand or kind of foodstuffs? If so, write the Boston American Food Query Editor. He will answer your inquiry in these columns as quickly as possible.

Food Query Editor:

I have heard of a flavoring extract by the name of Virginia Dare as being very powerful, pure and delicious. Could you tell me where I can buy this brand of extract? Do you know anything about this extract and where I can buy it?
MRS. B. P.
Watertown, Mass.

The Virginia Dare flavoring extracts, put up by Garrett & Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., we understand is a very high-class piece of goods, and you can purchase same at John Gilbert, Jr., Co., No. 126 Boylston Street, Boston.

Food Query Editor:

I would like to know whether I can buy Russian Caravan tea in tins put up by Ridgeway's. I can buy their Silver and Gold label and also Ridgeway's Her Majesty's blend, but I prefer the Russian Caravan. So if you can help me out on this I would appreciate it very much.
MRS. M. K. L.,
Somerville, Mass.

You can secure any of the various label and brand Ridgeway's teas at the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa stores. These people carry a complete line of these goods.

Food Query Editor:

Last year I purchased some wonderful beets and tomatoes put up in glass jars. They were really very delicious. It was just like eating fresh vegetables. The name on the jar was Lily of the Valley, and I bought them in a store near the market but not in the market. Could you help me out by telling me where this brand can be secured?
MRS. F. E. W.,
Dorchester, Mass.

Lily of the Valley selected tomatoes and beets, in glass, put up by the New York Canner, Inc., of Rochester, N. Y., can be secured at either H. L. Morrill & Co., No. 11 Merchants Row, or H. Strater & Son, No. 74 Sudbury Street, Boston.

Food Query Editor:

Have you ever heard of a Diamond W brand of molasses? It comes put up in a can about the size of a tomato can. I find this a cleaner and more convenient way to buy molasses and this brand is very fine. Please tell me through your column where Diamond W brand can be bought.
MRS. W. A. R.,
Newton, Mass.

The W. Wirt Wickes & Son, No. 16 Commercial Lane, New York, put up the Diamond W brand of molasses in cans such as you describe. The contents of same, two pounds and five ounces. You can secure this molasses at any of the Mohican Stores.

Food Query Editor:

Please tell me if there is a "Honey brand" of bacon gotten out. I have been told that one of the big markets gets out a ham by that name. Thanking you,
R. C. K.,
Brookline, Mass.

You can secure the Honey brand of bacon at the National Butchers store in Coolidge Corner, Brookline, Mass.

Food Query Editor:

I have been living in Providence for a number of years and have been using a very high grade and popular ham and bacon known as the Sperry & Barnes. Believe these goods are put up in New Haven, Conn. I would appreciate it if you could tell me through your column where I could secure the above mentioned merchandise in Greater Boston.
MRS. P. E. U.,
Cambridge, Mass.

Sperry & Barnes goods are put up in New Haven, Conn., and we know of only one store in Boston where you can secure their ham and bacon, that is the Weston-Thurston Co., No. 23 New Faneuil Hall Market.

In last week's paper we told Mrs. N. O. T., Back Bay, she would have to secure her Tao Tea direct from the packers in New York City. We have since found out, through the courtesy of one of our readers, that this tea can be purchased at Geo. B. Markham's store, 525 Gorham St., Lowell, Mass.

COOLIDGE WILL AVOID FOREIGN DISPUTES

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, Oct. 11 (CNS)—President Coolidge has definitely abandoned all thought of forcing a vote on the World Court or involving the next Congress in any wrangle over foreign policies. His policy is 'Take care of America first.'

The President has conducted a quiet referendum among his friends and visitors and has verified his own strong convictions that the people of this country want to be kept free from the embroilments of other nations.

He believed in the League of Nations several years ago as one of the "Murray Crane Republicans" anxious for its success. But he is enough of a democrat to realize the duty of a president is to carry out the clearly expressed will of the public and not to impose ideas upon them against their will.

He also believes the League policy was settled by Congress and that the World Court was a Harding idea solely. Mr. Harding's friends have declared the late President's policy was to say to the people, "This is how I feel about the World Court. Take it or leave it. I will abide by your decision."

Near the close of his Alaskan tour Mr. Harding was said to have been convinced that the American public did not want the World Court.

The third and most important reason for President Coolidge's attitude is based on practical politics grounds. He believes that his entire program of domestic legislation will be sacrificed if he provokes the Senate into a wrangle over foreign policies.

LEGISLATURE MEETS IN OKLAHOMA TODAY

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 11 (AP).—The Oklahoma Legislature, called into extraordinary session by Governor J. C. Walton, convened today. The House was called to order at 9:11 a. m., by D. A. Stovall, Representative from Choctaw County, who was chosen majority floor leader at a caucus last night.

Major Appleton a Who's News Leader, Declares Betty Alden

MAJOR JAMES W. APPLETON

Major Appleton of Ipswich and New York, who is master of the fox hounds of the Myopia Hunt Club, is added today to our "Who's News Along the North Shore."

By BETTY ALDEN

AS MASTER of the fox hounds at the Myopia Hunt Club, Major James W. Appleton is an important personage, and more than prominent enough to be added to our "Who's News Along the North Shore."

Major Appleton's place at Ipswich, which he calls the "Warners," is a typical old New England farmhouse. The house stands close by the roadside and the winding Ipswich River flows right by the dooryard. It is here that Major Appleton spends many week-ends during the Winter time when he comes on from his home at the Knickerbocker Club in New York to look after the pack of beagle hounds which he keeps on the place. In the Summer time the enthusiastic sportsman lives nearby on "Appleton Farms."

There is a den in the old farmhouse at Ipswich which is rich with the treasures of an M. F. H. There are rare early prints of hunting scenes, countless books on hounds and horses, as well as interesting trophies of the sport to which the master of the "Warners" is devoted.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY PAXON (Edith Bremer) are back fro mtheir wedding journey abroad and have joined the ever-increasing younger - married set out Cambridge.

Mrs. Paxon

As Miss Edith Bremer, the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, was acclaimed, one of the loveliest of June's brides. She is tall and slender, and of purest blonde type. The wedding at Emmanuel Church was followed by a reception at the Marlboro street home of the bride's parents.

SPENDING the late season at Hamilton are Mr. and Mrs. Julian Codman who are in Bar Harbor and other Maine resorts during the hot months.

Also in Hamilton just now are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr. (Julia Appleton), who are there for the hunting season.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD T. LYMAN have returned to their Beacon street home following a Summer spent on the North Shore, where they had the Abi cottage at Pride's.

AS for the hunters who follow the Myopia hounds, they are making the most of these brisk Fall days. This month the fox hounds are out on Mondays and Fridays, the time and place of the meeting being posted each time by Major Appleton.

The drag hounds, for the first half of the month, are out on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. This morning the hunters start at 6:30 from the Hamilton Meeting House, while on Saturday they will meet at noon in West Newbury on Indian Hill. A jolly affair will be the breakfast at Bald Pate Inn, Georgetown, with genial Bayard Tuckerman, Jr. as host for the occasion.

Now that the twentieth of the month is very nearly here, anticipation waxes keen over the Myopia Hunt Club's annual steeplechase to be held again at "Willowdale," Bradley, W. Palmer's fine estate in Topsfield. Last year the meeting was held at "Willowdale," with a large and enthusiastic throng of riders and spectators turning out for the event.

WRAGG OF NEEDHAM OUT FOR SENATOR

Representative Samuel H. Wragg of Needham today announced his candidacy for Senate in the Norfolk senatorial district, to succeed President Frank B. Allen of the Senate. Representative Wragg has served the Dedham-Needham district in the Legislature since 1919, and for several years was a member of the Board of Selectmen in Needham. He has been a member of several important legislative committees.

Every time you bite into a plump green olive

IT'S delightful just to bite into a firm, meaty green olive. And the salty tang appeals mightily to your taste.

Every time you eat one, you eat food that is good for you. Green olives are healthful. They contain olive oil. They have 1400 calories per pound—more than white bread, which has but 1215. PETERS IN SLIDE FOR LIFE ON HUNTING TRIP

Ex-Mayor Andrew J. Peters returned to Boston with tales of thrilling adventures and narrow escape after a month's hunting expedition in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains of British Columbia.

A 2000-foot slide down an icy mountain side which was brought to a edge of a precipice, encounters with grizzly bears, and hours of ploughing through a blizzard on his way back to camp, were among the experiences of the ex-Mayor.

Ex Mayor Peters

Mr. Peters left here August 28 last for Chicago, where he was joined by Edgar A. Bancroft, former president of the American Bar Association, and Horace K. Tenney. At Bridge, B. C., the party hired guides, a cook, ten pack horses and rode 400 miles into the Rocky Mountain country on horseback. Mr. Peter's narrow escape from death came, he said, when he was leading his horse down a slippery mountain trail. He lost his footing and slid down the side of the mountain for about 200 feet, before he caught himself just as he reached the edge of a deep precipice.

'RED STOCKING' GIRL SOUGHT BY LYNN POLICE

All girls with red shoes and stockings were being given the official attention of the Lynn police today.

The reason is that the police are seeking Helen Gosselin of that city as a witness in an automobile case.

Hebra French, vivacious and twenty-three years old, has a penchant for that color in footwear and hosiery.

Helen wore the red she and stockings when she drove automobile into a hydrant at Washington and Essex streets. Patrolman Joseph Cahill rescued her from the resultant geyser and arrested her companion, Albert B. Hartshorne, a Lynn automobile renter and father of four children, for not having license or registration.

"Even Lynn has its thrills," she commented to Cahill who took her to police headquarters where she said that she was Corinne Langley, a Boston actress. She was recognized, however, as the Gosselin girl.

A few months ago, Hartshorne preferred charges against Patrolman Orin Gleason, claiming that he had intruded into the girl's apartment. When Gleason testified that he had gone there at the request of the girl who was being followed by Hartshorne, the charges were dropped. Helen failed to appear when Hartshorne's case was called and it was continued until she is found.

"I am old and worn
as my face appears,
For I have walked on time
for a hundred years"

So begins an inscription on the door of an old clock. It could well be written on many clocks. For it is required of worthy clocks that on all the days of their lives they shall walk on time.

Without this virtue in our clocks they are useless. We depend upon them and our watches to regulate our daily lives; and, guided by them, we try to walk on time ourselves.

More latitude is allowed the appearance of a clock than is permitted its performance. In looks each should harmonize with the particular room where it is going to live.

Gay in gilt and glass, the reception and drawing room clock greets you. Severe in mahogany dress is the one in the living-room. Leather or enamel is proper for the boudoir or traveling bag.

A clock makes a desirable wedding, birthday, or anniversary gift. May we show you those we have appropriate for such gifts?

'OLD NEW YORK' IS PERFECT ACHIEVEMENT

Characterizing "Little Old New York," now starring Marion Davies at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York, and soon to be presented in all the principal cities of the country, as the best picture of a month, wherein there were many contenders for that honor, Laurence Reid, in the November issue of Motion Picture Classics, adds his chant of the chorus and praise sung of both production and star. Of the picture and the work of Miss Davies, Mr. Reid writes as follows:

Marion Davies

"Cosmopolitan's gorgeous tapestry, 'Little Old New York,' an adaptation, incidentally, of the highly successful sentimental play, comes to the screen a most compelling film—one created to withstand any criticism which might be hurled against it. The achievement is well-nigh perfect. It carries one of the most charming and simplest love stories that have ever graced the silver-sheet and is performed with genuine feeling and depth of understanding for its picturesque characters."

BACKGROUND ACCURATE.

"Nothing has been eliminated to furnish an accurate background of early Manhattan—when John Jacob Astor conducted a fur-store and founded the Astor fortunes through his real estate ventures—when Commodore Vanderbilt piloted the ferry to Staten Island—when Delmonico established his name as an extraordinary restaurateur. These figures and many more which had to do with early Gotham stalk across the screen giving color and atmosphere to a delectable tale of capricious love and adventure.

"One becomes quite transported over the struggle of the plucky Patricia O'Day who comes to America impersonating her dead brother in order to inherit the fortune left to him by a prosperous uncle. Marion Davies in this role is irresistible as the gay, yet wistful little masquerader. She is capricious and fanciful—playful and sad—and her pantomime, so perfectly expressed, puts a quietus on the silly argument that she is not a good actress.

NARRATIVE INTERESTS.

"Naturally, the promise of keeping up her masquerade when the most obtuse member of the opposite sex could easily penetrate her disguise is no more convincing than it was upon the stage—for we must imagine that she talked in a delicate voice. But such an argument for criticism is beside the point—completely obliterated by the quality of the settings—always rich and picturesque—by the quaint atmosphere and by the illuminating incident—incident which introduces Fulton's invention, the Clermont, and its historic sail up the Hudson and the delightful episodes in the lives of Astor, Brevoort and Vanderbilt.

"But details aside, it is the narrative which interests us the most. It is told in a straightforward manner, releasing moments of tender sentiment, pathos and humor. Except for Patricia's account of her deception before the city council, there is never a scene introduced which hasn't a legitimate reason for being there."

K. OF C. COUNCIL INSTALS OFFICERS

More than 700 members of the order from all sections of the State attended the installation of officers of Roxbury Council 123, Knights of Columbus, in Boston Normal School Hall, Huntington avenue, Roxbury. The installing officer was the new District Deputy John Delay and suite. Governor's Councillor George L. Curran, of the Governor's Council, arranged an entertainment, consisting of vocal and instrumental selections from the different Boston theatres.

The Grand Knight was Charles W. Nicholson.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD DIDN'T RUN AWAY

"I never forget my duty to my fellow man, regardless of appointments."

With these words Ex-Mayor "Honey" Fitzgerald dismissed as false a statement that, bending over a man his machine had run down, he drew out his watch and said impatiently, "I have an engagement with Mayor Sullivan in ten minutes."

Fitzgerald is in Worcester today testifying in a suit against him for $15,000 by Orrin D. Webber of Oakham. Webber was struck by Fitzgerald's car in September, 1922.

Wrinkles Smoothed Away Like Magic by New Cream

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

"USE LIQUID ARVON"

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Our WHILE-YOU-WAIT Repairing Is the Talk of the Town

One day at Gouverneur Morris's charming old Spanish home, in the heart of Monterey, he and Peter B. Kyne and I got to talking about men and women and like subjects, and Mr. Morris expressed the opinion that most men hate the women they love.

I asked him why.

"Because they have to lie to them to get along with them," he answered.

From that talk proceeded others which finally resulted in his taking a concrete example from life and molding it into a novel.

That novel is our leading feature this month.

Seeks to Divorce YaleStar

MRS. SALOME J. TIERNEY.

WIFE OF "DICK" TIERNEY QUITS HIM FOR GOOD

New Bedford, Oct. 11.—Divorce is to be the next step taken by Mrs. Salome J. Tierney, whose family troubles are the main topic of conversation in this city's young and fashionable social set.

Two court actions have already been taken by the twenty-three-year-old wife of "Dick" Tierney, former Yale track star, now an automobile distributor.

Mrs. Tierney filed suit for $50,000 against her millionaire mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Tierney, of No. 565 Madison street, Fall River.

Then the young wife had her husband arraigned in District Court on non-support charges.

Next will come the filing of divorce papers by Mrs. Tierney's lawyers, according to friends of the young couple.

While Tierney was in court getting a continuance of the non-support case until October 19, his pretty young wife was trekking to the home of her wealthy parents in New Rochelle, N. Y.

"My mother-in-law attempted to dominate the family," the younger Mrs. Tierney is quoted as saying.

The young couple has a beautiful home at No. 658 Rockdale avenue, New Bedford.

FINED FOR INSULT TO LEGION HEAD

Portland, Me., Oct. 11.—After a jury had twice reported disagreement, a verdict of guilty was returned in United States District Court against Emil Dick, superintendent of the Barker Mills, Auburn, Me., indicted for sending an indecent letter to Commander Alvin M. Owsley of the American Legion. Dick was fined $10.

Alvin M. Owsley

The letter accused the legion leader of spreading French propaganda in defence of French occupation of the Ruhr. Dick said he was a German admitted writing the letter, and declared he was loyal to America during the war and bought $2,500 worth of Liberty Bonds.

GOVERNOR TO REVIEW 2 HOLIDAY PARADES

Governor Cox tomorrow morning will review the parade of the Boston Police Department, after which he will review the drill on the parade ground on the Common. In the afternoon he will review the parade of the Spanish War veterans in observing the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Spanish War. He will then attend the memorial exercises in the Cadet armory.

Former Tax Collector of Scituate Gone 6 Months; Accounts $1,800 Short

H. Grant Doherty, graduate of Boston University Law School, a member of the Massachusetts Bar, and former tax collector of the town of Scituate, has been missing since last April.

Also missing, according to the town treasurer and the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, is the sum of $1,800.

Left behind is a sweetheart in Taunton, Miss Alice McDonald, who has wept bitter tears because he has not written her a line since he left.

Miss McDonald was seen frequently about Scituate in company with the gay young tax collector before he left. Since then she tells his relatives she has not seen or heard from him. She and his mother fear he may be dead.

FRUITLESS SEARCH

A five-month search by town officials, friends, relatives and representatives of the bonding house by which he was bonded for $10,000 has proved fruitless.

According to James Turner, chairman of the Scituate Board of Selectmen, the shortage in the funds handled by young Doherty, was discovered when he was defeated for re-election to the office of tax collector, and the books were taken over by his successor, Harold Cole.

The shortage was supposed to be about $7,000, and the selectmen were running around red-headed. The former tax collector was gone. No one could find him. No one could find the tax books. Then some one thought it would be wise to go to his home and investigate there.

FIND MANY CHECKS

A safe was found in Doherty's room. It had once been a safe belonging to the town of Scituate. An old-time tax collector was called in who knew the combination. He opened the safe and found a little more than $5,000 in checks piled in one of the compartments of the safe.

They had apparently been jammed into the safe in a careless manner and looked at first glance, the selectmen say, like a bunch of old paper.

It was discovered that this mess consisted of the checks of scores of taxpayers who had paid their 1directly months before. That reduced the shortage.

Doherty, who is but 23 years old, was elected tax collector a year ago last March.

Boston Babies Have Large Heads, Indicating Brainy Kiddies, Says Health Expert

Three-Months-Old Youngsters Score Amazingly High in Intelligence Tests

Boston kiddies are brainy.

They have big heads according to Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, who has examined over 400 children at the Better Babies Conference of the Boston Health Show in Mechanics Building. He says the size of a baby's head often indicates the amount of brains.

Babies three months old come out higher in mentality tests than many adults who undergo intelligence tests, it was said.

"You're never too young to take a brain test," says Dr. Drake.

MENTAL TESTS POPULAR.

The mental tests which take place in a white curtained booth are about the most popular features of the show, judged by the number of parents who watch the examination through the glass windows of the baby house.

Toy blocks, dolls, kewpies and soft rubber balls are piled on tables around the room. When the babies are frightened or have crying spells in other departments the nurse carries them into the mental test booth, where tears are soon dried in the excitement of chewing on a rubber ball or building up block houses.

GRASPS KEWPIE DOLL.

When the first baby came in for a test yesterday there was already an interested crowd outside. Wrapped in a soft wool blanket the little girl, just 6 months, was laid on the large center table. One of the brightest of the kewpie dolls was chosen and held before the child's eyes. The tot grasped for the doll, showing that she was already alert to color and movement. Several bright red blocks were next passed before the child's eyes. She cooed with delight and followed each rotation with her eyes.

The next test, sitting unsupported without mamma's arms, was not so popular, and the baby began to wail. A shiny blue celluloid rattle, however, soon dried the tears. Other

ANNOUNCES HE NEEDS $5,000

Has Been Tomahawked and Stabbed and Sued, and the Cash Would Come in Handy

Who wants to become a Count of Italy? Do not all speak at once. An imposing title is for sale here and $5,000, maybe less, takes it.

After being tomahawked in the arm and stabbed in the suspenders, with his divorce yet undecided, Arnaldo Francesco Busi, "Count of Lombardia" and Boston tailor, offers to sell his title.

He has commissioned his attorney, Felix Forte, to negotiate the deal. Money will talk at Mr. Forte's office, No. 418 Pemberton Building.

Title as Count of Lombardia, Italy, won by heroic services on the battlegrounds of the 15th and 18th centuries, is the one offered.

"Count" Busi, who claims he has a legitimate right to transfer the title outside the family, will listen to any one who can jingle 5,000 iron men.

Authenticity of the heraldic scroll, bearing the Busi coat of arms and title history, is proven by the document itself, signed by Director Cirnino Ottavi, Archives of Heraldry, Palermo, Italy, and bearing official stampings.

"Count" Busi wields his shears as coatmaker at No. 153 Court street. He lives at No. 50 Green street. He is thirty years old.

Recently he sued his "Contessa," Ermilia Busi, charging cruel and abusive treatment. Disposition of the case is now under advisement by Justice Hall.

In the divorce action, tried in September, Busi charged his wife with attacking him with a hatchet, slashing his arm. She also stabbed him in the suspenders, he asserted, completely ruining the "galluses" and puncturing his side for a quarter inch to boot. A screwdriver also figured as a weapon, for variety.

They were wed in Palermo, Italy, in 1918, and have three children. One of these, a boy, John, four years old, would be in line for the title. The father figures he can do more for his boy's future with money than with a title, and as far as the "Contessa" is concerned, if he gets a divorce she loses out anyway. An earlier divorce libel resulted in reconciliation.

IMPOSING WORDS.

The inscription, in Italian, on the document, reads:

"The Busi family gave service to the native country from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century. Philip the Infant of Spain bestowed the title of count on the brothers, Evarista and John Felix, decurions of Casalmaggiore. Empress Maria Theresa in 1770 bestowed the same title of Counts of Lombardia, then a state of Austria. Francesco I, emperor, confirmed these later to Joseph and Antonio Busi, making them transferable by heredity to the eldest male heir. Francesco and Joseph were declared counts in 1875." Francesco last named is the father of the Hub tailor.

WOMAN HELD UP AT GUN POINT IN SOUTH END

Two unidentified men, armed with revolvers, entered the home of Catherine Gethesski, No. 45 Village street, South End today and demanded money. The woman told them they were in the wrong house and screamed from the open window.

The two men darted out of the room and down the stairs to a taxi. There a third man had been left on guard. When the woman screamed the man on guard shoved a gun in front of Joseph Arnowitz, the taxi driver and ordered him to start.

Arnowitz said he couldn't. Then he said he wouldn't. The other pair arrived then and all three left Arnowitz and his taxi and fled.

The men were about 24 years old. One was five feet eight inches tall, weighed around 140 pounds and wore light raincoat and light cap. Another was about five feet, seven inches tall, weighed 150 and wore dark cap, brown suit and black shirt.

LAWRENCE GAS AND ELECTRICITY CUT

Lawrence, Oct. 11.—Price of gas and electricity will be reduced on December 1 next, the Lawrence Gas & Electric Company announced today. Gas will be cut 5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, making it cost $1.05 per 1,000 cubic feet, minus a 10 per cent. discount if bills are met promptly. Electricity will sell at 12 cents per kilowatt hour, being reduced a cent.

MYSTERY VEILS $2,200 CAFE ROBBERY

A fast worker slipped through a rear door of the Claridge Sea Grill, No. 615 Washington street, employed the combination of the office safe and made a getaway with $2,200.

This is the way the story reached the ears of the police last Monday and how it was disseminated to reporters today, after, it is presumed, some seventy-two hours' investigation.

Several mysterious aspects of the robbery are causing speculation. Joseph Terzcette, night watchman, says he found the safe and a rear door open as he made his rounds at 12:20 a. m.

James Karadimos, president of the company, which operates the restaurant, is reported to have left the restaurant fifteen minutes before.

He returned and was told of the robbery by Terzette. Karadimos made an investigation of his own and found, he says, that the safe had been looted by someone familiar with the combination.

FITZGERALD TELLS OF AUTO ACCIDENT

Worcester, Oct. 11. — Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston resumed the witness stand today in Superior Court testifying in his own behalf in a $15,000 suit brought by Orrin D. Webber of Oakham.

Orrin seeks damages for injuries alleged to have been received when John F. Fitzgerald struck by Mr. Fitzgerald's automobile in Oakham, Sept. 28, 1922. Fred Fitzgerald, son of the former mayor, was driving the car.

Mr. Fitzgerald testified that Webber seemed bewildered when the car approached and that after crossing the road the man turned back and struck the mudguard. The witness declared his car was travelling 25 miles an hour at the time.

LLOYD GEORGE PARTY VISITS NIAGARA

Toronto, Oct. 11.—David Lloyd George and his party boarded their special train today en route to Niagara Falls. The party passed the night at Government House, after a day which was a series of enthusiastic welcomes.

Radio Trade Notes

A. P. Merchant's radio construction school on the second floor of their large store cannot be too highly praised. Operated free of charge to their customers it provides every facility for the construction of a set. The school is open every evening and is especially well patronized by business men who like to use tools and find it a pleasant recreation for a few hours in the evening to work on their own radio set.

The George H. Forell Co., No. 455 Washington street, is selling a very serviceable tube for $1.50. Many customers who bought one tube returned to get others and said that they were surprised at the volume and clarity of tone from a tube which sold for so little money.

The weather is growing appreciably cooler and the evenings are getting longer, Mr. Man. If you wish to enjoy yourself during the long cold Winter nights you'd better get busy and get your set in working order, or if you don't happen to have one, get one by all means.

MARY PICKFORD COMPLIMENTS MISS DAVIES

MARY PICKFORD was one of the first to send her congratulations to Marion Davies, fiancee of "Little Old New York," following the premiere of the picture upon the photoplay on the Coast. Miss Pickford attended the opening with her husband, Douglas Fairbanks. "Your performance as 'Pat O'Day' is a perfect delight," wired Miss Pickford. "'Little Old New York' is a beautifully done production, a most entertaining picture. I like it better than I did even 'Knighthood.'"

THE LATEST announcement concerning Lillian Gish is that she is to appear in "Joan of Arc." With two such productions ahead of her in "Romola," which is to be made in Italy this Winter and "Joan of Arc," to be produced in France later next year, Miss Gish must be counted among the leaders of the film art.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must keep your liver and bowels well. There's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you plainly per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

USE DELATONE

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm or pain from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed. Mix fresh as wanted.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

A Delightful Romance with an Unusual Heroine

This Story Will Be Shown Soon in Motion Pictures Starring Marion Davies at One of Your Favorite Theatres in Boston

THE STORY SO FAR:

Larry Delavan, a fashionable young man in the days when Fulton was perfecting his steamboat in New York, expects that his stepfather will leave him his large fortune. When John Jacob Astor reads the will he discovers that all the property goes to a nephew, Patrick O'Day, in Ireland. Astor is made trustee and Larry guardian of the heir. Delavan is terribly disappointed. The O'Day family is about to be evicted from their poor home in Ireland, when a strange solicitor appears and informs them of their good fortune. They prepare to start for New York.

By Rida Johnson Young,
Whose Plays Have Won Her a High Place Among American Playwrights.

"Little Old New York," from the Broadway Success of That Name, by Rida Johnson Young. Has Been Created Into a Superlative Motion Picture by Cosmopolitan Productions—Direction of Sidney Olcott—Adapted by Luther Reed.

HALLECK joined them often. But his nights were haunted by the spectre of old Astor, always the first to reach his counting house, merciless in his judgment of sluggards. All very well for Larry and Brevoort to play all night, and freshen themselves up for breakfast under the pump!

"You can sleep all day!" Halleck would grumble. "As for me, I'm a slave—I'm more held down than any slave!"

To Larry, though, there did come moments of depression; moments when he wondered if the life he lived were worth while. For to a young man in old New York, no matter how devoted he might be to the pursuit of pleasure, there were bound to be intimations of the idleness of his ways.

New York was a growing city, a busy, a hard-working city. It was a great port, through which there flowed much of the trade of the stirring nation. Already it had outstripped Philadelphia; Perth Amboy, once its rival, had sunk back into something like oblivion. It had no magnificent harbor; past it flowed the Hudson River, navigable itself to Albany, and reaching still farther westward by the Erie Canal.

There was vision in New York, and Larry Delavan, knowing everyone worth knowing, was bound to hear the talk that went about concerning the country's growth and what the future was to bring.

His neighbor, Mr. Schuyler, the great banker, was one of the men who sometimes fired the imagination. He had known Betty Schuyler all her life; she had a pretty way of calling to him, sometimes, to come and dine with them, taking pity, in her innocence, upon his lonely bachelor estate—and knowing, too, that while Ariana de Puyster was abroad Larry was unlikely, of his own volition, to seek much company outside his house. And Betty had her own notions of how good for him were the parties that, at times, were kept up in the still hours of the night.

"This is a great country," Larry heard Schuyler say once. "I think, the greatest in the world—potentially, the richest. It is too great—that is our difficulty. Transportation is the hub of our problem."

"There is much talk of steam," said Larry. "I hear that in England—"

"Dreams, my boy—idle dreams," said Schuyler. "Look at Mr. Fulton—wasting his time and his talents upon this steamboat of his!"

"Suppose steam worked, though, sir—wouldn't it solve the transportation problem?"

"She would flying!" Schuyler laughed. "You'll be joining those next who say they expect to see men flying."

Patricia O'Day (Marion Davies) in "Little Old New York"

"No," he went on, "we must stick to what we can do. We must build more and more roads—build them to last, as the old Romans did, whose roads are still in use in England. And we must breed good horses—stout horses, that will enable us to maintain regular stage routes between our cities. And canals!

"I see a network of canals, threading all this land, joining our rivers, carried across our hills by the skill of our engineers. We shall do better to devote ourselves to work within the limitations God has imposed upon us than we shall if we pursue every will o' the wisp like steam that dreamers like Stephenson and Fulton dangle before us!"

Larry did not presume to argue further. But he was not convinced. For he knew Mr. Robert Fulton, that grave young man with the dour Scotch countenance, had met him through the agency of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who ate and slept and talked transportation, morning, night and night.

Vanderbilt believed in steam and its future with a passion bound to be impressive to one like Larry, whose affectation it was to have no passions.

"I tell you, Delavan," he said, "I can see what's coming! Steam railways stretching clear across the continent! Have you studied the map of this land? We think great things of the Hudson—I tell you, it's the Mississippi that is the river of our future! Look!" He spread out a map. His finger ran along the Great Lakes. It came back, then, and followed the Hudson. It came to rest at a point upon one of the Great Lakes.

A Big Change

"There, a hundred years hence, will be the centre of this country!" he said. "I can see a great city raising there, on the prairie. I can see railways radiating from it, east, west, north, south. I care nothing for what your Schuylers say. I know. The railways will come—steam will come—because without them this country cannot fulfill its destiny."

"But Fulton—?"

"Fulton is trembling on the very verge of success to-day!" said Vanderbilt. "Money is all he needs to give him the victory." He sighed. "If I were rich—! I shall be, some day, I think. But I would give much to be able to finance Fulton now! It is a terrible thing to have such faith in anything as I have in his steamboat, and to see its success hanging in the balance for the want of a few thousand dollars, and to be unable to lift a finger to help him!"

"I wish I could do something," said Larry. He was greatly moved. "If things had gone as I hoped—expected! But I'm no better off than you, Vanderbilt—and as well, indeed. You will be rich, as you say—you're the sort who succeeds, every time."

A Charming Serial of Love and Adventure in the Picturesque Days of the Beginnings of the Astor and Vanderbilt Fortunes

"I have heard of your disappointment," said Vanderbilt. "But the heir has not appeared to claim his inheritance?"

"Not yet!" said Larry, and laughed. "I'll wager I'd not have been so slow!"

"Suppose he doesn't come? There is a limit to his time, is there not?"

"A year—yes! Oh, in that case, everything comes to me. But I dare not build hopes upon that—not yet."

"Suppose fortune is kind to you, though? Would you consider advancing ten thousand dollars to Fulton then?"

"Consider it? My dear fellow, I'd do it like a shot! I like Fulton—I like you. I believe you know what you're talking about. And I'm enough of a mechanic to feel pretty sure that Fulton is on the right track, no matter what any one says. I'd like nothing better than a chance to share his profits."

"That's something for us to look forward to," said Vanderbilt. "I shall bear our talk in mind, if I may, if the time comes. And—I hope that it will, for your own sake, as well as for Fulton's."

Vanderbilt was by no means the only one who knew Larry who felt so. There had been much sympathy for him when the nature of his stepfather's will had become known. No one wasted much sympathy upon an unknown boy in Ireland, no matter how poor and how deserving he might be —not when his fortune meant the casting into poverty of one so likable as Larry Delavan.

As the year that had been allowed for young Patrick O'Day to appear and claim his inheritance wore on it became more and more difficult for Larry Delavan to believe that he would come. Astor kept him informed of the progress of the search; seemed genuinely glad that, thus far, it had failed.

"I have my reports," he said. "From London my agents and correspondents have sent out men. They have spared no trouble—no expense. In Dublin there is no sign or trace of this O'Day. He has disappeared. They follow up clues—it is their duty, as it is mine. But we bear nothing."

Never had words spoken in a curious mixture of English and German had a more welcome sound. Larry's friends ceased even to think of the ill luck that had befallen him.

"You'll enjoy your dish all the more, when you taste it," said Brevoort, "for the savor this waiting will give! Lord—a new sensation. I envy you, Larry—pon my word, I do."

"You needn't," said Larry. "It's all very well for you, but I'll not draw a good long breath now until the time is up."

Yet in his own heart he harbored no doubts. Surely, word would have come by now.

He had seen much of Vanderbilt; had become more and more interested in this invention of Robert Fulton's. He had no doubt of Fulton; the man was plainly on the right track. But he had spent all of his own fortune; the financing of the recent work had been a difficult matter. Vanderbilt was greatly worried.

A Business Deal

"We have had to deal with Mr. Schuyler's bank," he said. "We owe him $10,000. Schuyler has played safe—he has, in the vessel and the machinery, ample security, even should these experiments end in failure."

"You have money enough to see you through your trial trip?"

"Just enough," said Vanderbilt. "This is the situation. The notes to Mr. Schuyler's bank fall due almost at once. So do certain other obligations that must be met. Ten thousand dollars would cover everything. But suppose the trial trip is a success? Mr. Schuyler will have the notes. He can foreclose them, if he pleases—take everything. Mr. Fulton and those who have become interested with him would lose everything—the exploitation of the invention and all the profits would go to Mr. Schuyler."

"He would not do so mean a thing—"

SECRETS OF HEALTH

HOW ARE YOUR EYES?

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

DO your eyes get red and burn after you have used them a little while?

Do you develop headache after reading or sewing or doing other fine work for a time?

Do you sometimes have to look twice before you can see an object that was there all the time?

Do you squint when you try to look at something with care or when you shift your vision from one object to another at different distances from the eyes?

In this connection it is important to remember some fundamental facts:

Dr. Reed

First, the effort to see, like every other effort, whether conscious or unconscious, involves an expenditure of energy—some of the total energy of the body.

Second, all expenditure of energy tends to fatigue.

It can be seen from these facts alone how important it is to correct eyestrain in both children and adults—but especially in school children, in whom neglect may speedily result in irreparable damage not merely to the eyes, but on the whole system.

A dose at bedtime of
DR. CALDWELL'S
SYRUP PEPSIN
Made them feel jolly again

Good Health In Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Dr. G. H. Brown, V. S., of Frederic, Wis., nearly wrecked his stomach with purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his health, as it did Mrs. J. S. Etheridge's, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Does Not Gripe

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will soon encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a cent a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Syrup Pepsin will keep you and the family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 25 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

ONCE the business for which I had come was transacted, I left the office hurriedly, refusing an urgent luncheon invitation. All I wanted was to get out of doors and to walk and walk until my agitation blended into a blessed "ozone fatigue."

Paying the first instalment of Neal's debt was the high-water mark of a week which had held nothing else to emphasize it but the commonplaces of work and social intercourse. Joanie and Pat had come to our dinner for Carlotta and Tony, and I asked Betty and Ralph also to make sure that it should remain a social dinner and not become a business conference or a family squabble. As for the rest, life jogged along to the time of good, hard work.

My patience with the Merton Feather Company brought in a year's contract from them. Betty also acquired a new client. Our business flourished, and, except for my worry over Neal, the world seemed a pleasant place. My chief joy in it was not the success of my business, however, but the fact that Jim and I were being held together in a simple, happy family group, such as we hadn't shared for a long time.

Then, one glowing, sunshiny afternoon, Ralph telephoned to ask if I could meet him immediately at the office of the Searcher for Lost Persons."

"He has a clew," said Ralph with inestimable gentleness. "I'll shoot right up from the office, and you make it as soon as you can from your place. Or do you want to wait where you are and have me call on you?"

"I'll shoot right over," I cried, unconsciously copying Ralph's exuberance of language.

Then, stopping only long enough to tell Betty that Mr. Hennaberry had a clue, I raced out of the office at top speed and whirled over to the dingy, soggy office which I'd left in such a mood of disheartenment less than a fortnight before. I reached the objective a little ahead of Ralph and the fussy office boy insisted that I must wait for Mr. Lacy, as the boss couldn't waste time going over things "twice—not for nobody."

Presently Ralph came, and, without waiting for a by-your-leave, escorted me into the dingy office, where the wizened little lawyer sat behind his littered desk blinking at us wisely.

GOOD DAY TO SPECULATE

A LIVELY and eventful day is the forecast from this day's inter trants. The nature may be bold and aggressive, with the disposition to embark on important new projects. Although the astral aspects are encouraging, yet there may be a certain amount of hazard in the expenditure of money, since Jupiter holds an unfriendly place. Trifling annoyances should be banished. It is a lucky day for speculation.

grtd with a pathic intrst by what might be termed a morbidly curious crowd of some 45,000, most of whom probably make a business of attend- ing public affairs and other lugu- brious occasions.

Like professional pall-bearers they sat around in whispering groups and gave the eZorts of the boys in prac- tice the silent treatment. There was not a murmur left in the entire as- semblage.

CROWD GATHERS SLOWLY

In fact, the entire occasion was singularly devoid of the usual world's series clamor. There was no all-night vigil preserved outside the gates and no frantic rush by hysterical citizens for the choice seats in the unreserved sections when the portals were opened at 10 o'clock.

At that hour the crowd numbered less than 5000, and 50 minutes be- fore game time this had increased to 15,000 with most of the holders of reserved seats yet to put in an ap- pearance.

McGraw's team was a 5 to 4 favor- ite to win today's game.

The Yanks appeared on the field first, coming through the concrete wall at 1:39 clad in traveling grey. The Giants followed shortly after- ward and proceeded to indulge in batting practice. Here, McGraw juggled the cards a bit by sending Art Nehf, Jack Scott, Hugh Mc Quillan and Jack Bentley up to hit, thereby leaving the Yankees to speculate upon McGraw's pitching selection

STENGEL THRILLS CROWD.

Although it is possible he will not appear in the Giant lineup at all, Casey Stengel, who won yesterday's game with a home run in the ninth inning, staked the customers to a bald curly by socking the first ball pitched to him in batting practice into the right field stands.

Nehf was eliminated as a pitching possibility at an early hour when McGraw sent him out on the mound to pitch to the batters in practice.

Mr. Huggins' hopefuls took the field at 2:15 to the accompaniment of applause.

By NICK FLATLEY.

New York, N. Y., Oct. 11.—The old argument about brains and brawn has been dragged into this World's Series, and has caused the experts gener- ally to admit that the Giants will smear the Yanks once more, as easily as Dempsey flattened Firpo.

McGraw's smart athletes made a joke of the powerful Huggins' as- sault in the opening game, snatched an undeserved victory and are now 2 to 1 favorites for their third suc- cessive crown.

After the Wednesday disaster, its mighty difficult to see just how the Yanks can come back. They brought the same spirit into this series that marked their last year. Even a mere observer could notice that they didn't have much confidence, even with a three-run lead.

They were afraid of the Giants, as they were one year ago, and before that opening clash was over 'tho American Leaguers were taunted and derided into a state of mind that makes any chance for them al- most out of the question.

GIANTS HAD ALL BREAKS BUT THEY MADE THEM

There's no doubt the Giants had the breaks, but they were looking for them, forcing their luck, as the gam- blers say. They took a big chance by shooting Watson into the pastime. He wasn't able to stick around. Any other manager in the universe would have yanked Ryan when the A. L. hits went rattling around, but McGraw kept him in there, and won his game.

Huggins wasted some remarkable fine pitching by Bush to save a lost cause. McGraw still has all the reg- ulars who were supposed to win for him, left for the rest of the fray. He pulled the smart stuff, because he had the team to do it.

SENDING IN GOWDY WAS SAMPLE OF MAC'S STUFF

Sending Gowdy in to catch was a sample. Before Hank came to bat in the third, Hoyt hadn't given any batter more than one ball. His con- trol was remarkable. But the mem- ory of Hank's tremendous deeds, in his other series' appearance was in the young pitcher's mind.

He tried to make Hennery swing at bad balls. And as a result he tossed four bad ones, and had two men on the bases, with nobody out. That was the effect desired. Hen- nery was yanked to let a fast bird run. He had played his part. There's entirely too much said about psychology in sport these days. We would call it brains or common sense or something like that, this McGraw method.

TODAY'S PASTIME MAY DECIDE THE SERIES.

Today's pastime loomed very big. If the Giants win it, they will un- doubtedly breeze in.

If the Yanks cop the series will still be in the air.

The Giants, at home on their Polo Grounds, will be very, very hard to lick.

The Yanks, desperately slow on the bases, will be ultra careful from now out. That will hurt them, be- yond doubt. The Giants, speedy and flashy, will take chances and get away because the other fellows will be hurrying to stop them.

From where we perch, the re- mainder of this mixup looks like a parade for the McGraws.

GIANTS ARE PICKED TO BEAT YANKS AGAIN

THE HORRORSCOPE, By A SEER.

THIS is a doubtful day—doubtful if the Yanks will ap- pear for a third game if they get another licking.

The stars indicate that the Giants can start spending their winners' share now, if they feel that way. They will not waste it, never passing up anything.

The bear movement in big baseball will continue, the other units in the pool not throwing in any support.

This is a lucky day for those who like sure things.

Play the Giants.

Those whose birthday it is, can start in business, if they follow McGraw.

The crystal reads that Nehf, in the ascendant, will cross the path of Pennock.

These strange figures appear:

Giants	3	7	1
Yanks	1	6	1

GIRLS' BATTERY TELLS FANS ABOUT IT

The Boston American world's se- ries switchboard battery was as busy as a bevy of bees when interest of Boston fandom was at its height during the first game of the annual classic.

Five thousand calls an hour was the average number handled by the score of special operators engaged to keep Hub fans informed of the game's progress.

All calls were answered promptly and up-to-the-second information was disseminated to inquirers. Hardly had "Casey" Stengel connected with his winning home run drive than the news was being broadcasted via telephone. A few minutes later, the Boston American was on the street with a complete box score and a ball- by-ball account of the game.

The girls of the world's series bat- tery reported that Boston sentiment, as nearly as could be gathered from snatches shot over the phone by news-seekers, was with the Giants. Each day, the Boston American world's series telephone battery will work in the interest of Boston fans. Call Main 8714, 8715, 8716, 8719 or 8719, and get the inning-by-inning report of the game.

WOMAN JOCKEY THIRD IN NEWMARKET RACE

Newmarket, England, Oct. 11.—The running of the annual New- market town plate here today was made noteworthy by the participa- tion of a woman jockey. Miss Eliza- beth Tanner, the 29-yearold daughter of a prominent breeder, rode the favorite, Pannant, but came in third, finishing after Frocked and Flashy, ridden by male jockeys.

AMERICAN SCORE BOARD GIVES EVERY PLAY

Winthrop square was packed with eager baseball fans during the first game of the Worlds Series. As every pitched ball and every play was recorded on the Boston American score board, National and American League fans cheered or booed lustily, depending on how their favorites were affected.

Perched aloft behind home plate in the Yankee stadium in New York, Nick Flatley, Boston American baseball expert, speeded each minute detail of the play direct to the score board. Short seconds later Winthrop square echoed to the cheers which volleyed across the worlds greatest playground.

Boston fans seemed to be more interested in "Babe" Ruth than in the respective merits of the Giants and the Yankees. Each time the score board showed the Bambino at bat it was a signal for cheers of encouragement on one side and hoots and jeers on the other.

"Come on, Babe!" shouts Bill, an admirer. "Knock one over the fence for McGraw to look at."

"Don't be afraid of the big bum," yells Jack. "Make him break his back swinging."

And so on throughout the after- noon's pastime. Babe's friends had a chance to turn loose for the first time in the fifth inning when Babe waited out a screeching three-base hit. The joy was short lived, how- ever, for Ruth was doomed at the plate a moment later when Frisch made a perfect throw home after he nailed Bob Meusel's long fly.

"Told you he was a big bum," chides Jack.

"Oh, pipe down," argues Bill. "Huggins sent him home in it."

So closely was the play detailed on the score board that the fans, who watched the game as guests of the Boston American, did not miss a phase of the contest that could be observed from the box occupied at the Stadium by Judge Landis.

There was plenty to keep the crowd interested throughout the opening contest of the series, as the McGraw and Huggins clans battled for every point with fortune favor- ing first one and then the other.

The break came in the ninth. With two Giants retired, darkness gather- ing and Casey Stengel at bat, those who had wagered on McGraw's men cheered more in desperation than in confidence. Stengel crossed the dope. After looking a couple over the Giant center fielder socked one into deep center field that went for a home run.

The Yankees retired in order in their half of the ninth.

"What did I tell you about that bum, Ruth," said Jack, as the crowd started to melt away. "Guess Sten- gel stole the stuff."

"Come here tomorrow," invited Bill, "and you won't crack your lip laughing."

The score board will be in action throughout the series.

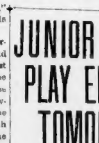
JUNIOR EAGLES PLAY ENGLISH TOMORROW

Jack Heaphy has worked overtime with his Boston College High school squad for the game with English at Fenway Park tomorrow. With all except two or three of his reg- ulars in top shape, Heaphy expects that the James street eleven will de- cisively defeat the Blue and Blue.



Jack Heaphy

English High has been at a disadvantage since the season started because of the lack of vet- eran material. Coach Ed Wilson has had a hard job to pick out the best of an inexperienced lot, and has not yet succeeded in putting a smooth working combination on the field.

Heaphy, on the other hand, has plenty of good material to work with, but has been severely handicapped by the lack of a suitable practice field. T! Maroon and Gold players have had to journey far from the h.. school, thus making the practice ses- sions almost too short to accomplish the best results.

TUFTS SECOND TEAM WILL PLAY AT LYNN

The Tufts second team will meet the General Electric eleven tomor- row afternoon at Lynn. Jimmy Le- Cain, second team mentor, has drilled his players all week and the entire squad is in fine condition for the battle.

Nellie Briggs, 1922 freshman cap- tain, will cover the pivot position for the seconds. Gamage, the star halfback, will be watched closely. This combination is expected to do most of the scoring by the second team.

GIANT LEADER SAYS HIS TEAM CAN'T LOSE

By DAVE BANCROFT

Captain of the New York Giants

New York, Oct. 11.—What a ball game that one was! And what a mag- nificent battle those Yanks gave us! It took about everything we had to beat 'em, but the gladsome thought is that we did win. It's my belief that the splend- id team work of the Giants plus their fight- ing spirit in the face of big odds added to the wonderful generalship of John McGraw in the issuance of pitching odds which won the ball game for us.

Dave Bancroft

Now we only need three more to win that third world's banner for our pilot.

That means that we need play only .500 per cent. baseball by win- ning three out of the next six whereas the Yankees must play .750 baseball for victory because they would be compelled to win four out of the remaining six.

Where we are especially strong right now in my opinion is in the fact that we have Nehf and Bent- ley fit and ready to toss against the Yankees, whereas we beat two of the Yankees' real pitching aces in the first game.

I've figured in a number of World's Series battles, but I don't think there was any in my whole career that was more of a thriller nor one more bitterly contested than yesterday's.

And that climax act of the game, Casey Stengel's mighty home run swat—made it all seem more like one of Dick Merrywell's stories than a real ball game.

John McGraw wants a third world's championship banner to hang up in the ball park—and we're going to get it for him.

GIANTS' FIELDER BATTLING FOR LIFE

New York, Oct. 11.—While the Giants succeeded in defeating the Yankees in the first game, Ralph Shinners of the Giants was battling for his life in a hospital here. He is fighting typhoid influ- enza.

Ralph Shinners.

Fate has been playing with loaded dice against Shin- ners. He came from the Indian- apolis club of the American Asso- ciation in 1922. He was heralded as one of the best hitters and base-runners that circuit ever developed. He earned the cen- ter field berth.

Then fate tripped him up. George Smith, then with Philadelphia, begned him. He didn't tell McGraw of the severe pain in his head due to a blood clot which was forming. He played in several series after he was struck. But his work showed his condition. One day after a mid- play he confessed to McGraw. The latter sent him to a specialist.

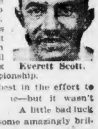
Shortly after Shinners went to Toledo of the American Association. He came back. McGraw recalled him. Prepared to get into the World's Series, Shinners was stricken with typhoid influenza.

BREAKS LICKED THE YANKEES, SAYS SCOTT

By EVERETT SCOTT.

Captain of the New York Yankees.

New York, Oct. 11.—We lost the opener. But in defeat we've not dis- couraged. Every one of us feels the jinx was still busy with us in the first game— and we're think- ing, too, that the jinx is about to say goodby to us. If that happens we'll jump right out and win enough ball games to annex the world's championship.



Everett Scott.

We gave our best in the effort to win the first game—but it wasn't quite good en- A little bad luck here and there, some amazingly bril- liant defensive work by the Giants —and the old ball game went the other way.

If Wally Pipp's leg had not been ailing we might have kept right on playing until darkness ended the struggle. For if Pipp's pedals had been O. K. we certainly would have scored in the eighth and the tallies at the end of the ninth would have been 5-5 instead of 5-4 in favor of the other fellows.

The Giants are a fine crowd of athletes, none can dispute that fact. They're fighters from end to end in any battle in which they play. But they're also a bit lucky.

But there isn't much use in point- ing out all the reasons why we lost. The main reasons seem to be that the other fellows made more runs. We smashed out twelve hits to their eight, made as many double plays as the Giants and more extra bases. But we didn't win.

GREB AND LOUGHRAN READY FOR BIG BATTLE TONIGHT

CHAMPION IS FAVORITE FOR FANEUIL BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, and Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia will stage a title series of their own when they clash in a ten round bout at the Faneuil A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building tonight. Greb rules a 10 to 7 favorite in the betting, but he will have to step faster than he ever did before if he is to win the decision.

There is intense interest in this match and it is expected that a capacity crowd will be on hand to witness the contest.

It will be Greb's first decision bout since he won the middleweight title by conquering Johnny Wilson. The champion apparently does not intend to pick on setups, as Loughran is one of the world's leading 160-pound boxers. The Philadelphian has won popular decisions over Greb and Mike McTigue.

Loughran, who is twenty-two years of age, arrived in town early Wednesday morning. He paraded around town telling the boys how he dropped Greb to the canvas in their first frolic in New York and later lost a questionable decision to the Pittsburg man.

"I would be light heavyweight champion of the world if they gave decisions in Philadelphia," declared Loughran. When Mike McTigue returned to America after winning over Battling Siki, we battled in the Quaker City. I walloped Mike around for eight sessions, but all I got was the popular verdict."

LOUGHRAN AND GREB AT BEST WEIGHT.

Loughran looked in perfect condition. He will scale about 159 pounds tonight. This, of course, means that Greb's title will not be at stake but it will result in Loughran entering the ring with all of his strength. As Greb will be around 163 pounds, he will be able to show the marvelous fighting form that has enabled him to win over heavyweights.

Greb is not at his best when he is obliged to make 160 pounds. This was evident in his tussle with Wil [illegible].

There will be action from bell to bell this p. m. Greb is certain to set a dizzy pace from the start in an effort to take the fight away from Loughran. The latter is an experienced fighter and will also try to get the jump on his opponent. As a result, the fans should see some of the fastest milling ever staged in this city.

KAGAN AND McLAUGHLIN IN SEMI-FINAL.

Joe Eagan, Dorchester middleweight, and Johnny McLaughlin of Philadelphia will produce the thrills in the semi-final of ten rounds. This is an attractive offering, Eagan, once more back under the management of Eddie Mack, is fighting in great form, while McLaughlin has shown to advantage in contests with Eddie Shevlin and Pal Reed.

Homer Bow Finnegan, a Quincy boxer, will collide with Freddy Williams of Dorchester in one of the eight-round matches. Finnegan has been showing in feature bouts in Wash[illegible] and is expected to make a bid for a coming tonight. Will [illegible] is good enough to extend Finnegan.

Another eight round contest will bring [illegible] Whitey Allen of Hyde Park and Cain Armstrong of this city. Both should be a slugging match all the way.

Mike Green and Joe McCarthy have been kept busy handling out postboards at the Faneuil Club's office at No. 39 Court street.

Jack Conway Picks Greb and 7 Other 'Live' Ones

Jack Conway, holder of the world's record for picking winners, today attempts to name eight winners of boxing and wrestling contests. Jack says:

"I am letting the family mosh balls ride on Harry Greb in his bout with Tommy Loughran at the Faneuil A. C.'s show tonight. Greb, able to conquer heavyweights as easily as middleweights, will have to show all of his stuff to win, as Loughran is the real goods in the fistic line.

"In the semi-final we are sitting along with Joe Eagan in his bout with John by McLaughlin.

"Honey Boy Finnegan is our choice over Freddy Williams, while Whitey Allen should conquer Carlo Armstrong.

"Over in New York Harry Wills, great negro heavyweight, is our choice to win over Homer Smith, the bird who caused Luis Firpo so much trouble.

"Stasiak, Stone and Andrews are the young men we like in the big mat carnival at the Grand Opera House tonight.

"We were just going to hand you some dope on the World's Series when we recollected that Nick Flatley has been picking 'em right, as usual."

Jack has picked 102 winners out of a possible 122 this year.

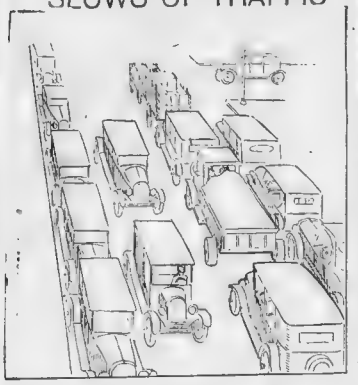
HOW PARKING OF CARS SLOWS UP TRAFFIC



PARKED AUTOS CAUSE TRAFFIC TIE-UPS

TRAFFIC SUGGESTION NO. 14

The American prints today another in a series of suggestions to solve Boston's acute traffic problem. The correspondents, Lord & Webster, deplore the present situation, etc., oppose a previous suggestion of [illegible] from the streets and proscribe instead, a ban on parking automobiles along the streets.

"The time is coming—and soon as do the correspondents, "when a man who parks a car in the business area will be promptly arrested for blocking traffic.

"The principal cause of [illegible] traffic congestion can be attributed to empty automobiles parked along the streets. These [illegible] width of the street and make it impossible for slower moving [illegible] to draw to one side to permit [illegible] moving vehicles to pass. Furthermore, there is no excuse for them. They are not carrying foodstuffs or other commodities. They are doing no useful work.

"If horses were barred from the streets it would mean an increase in prices Boston residents pay for many of the things they buy."

of No. 59 West Concord street, Boston, was in just that position.

READ OF OFFER.

Mr. Condon read all about the marvelous offer by the Boston American and started thinking it over. The words of praise that the razor has had for the Auto-Strop offered by the American finally caused him to investigate.

Well, after looking the razor over he got one and took it home. There he tried it out. Now he is one of the thousands of satisfied users of the American Who Ar Trading the razor.

"I got a smooth shave with less trouble, less fussing and absolutely no pulling, said Mr. Condon. It was really wonderful. I shall never go back to the old-fashioned razor again."

THOUSANDS OF OTHERS.

There are thousands of others just like Mr. Condon who are finding new joy in the Auto-Strop safety razor that the Boston American is giving for only 36 cents and two coupons. Take their tip, clip the coupons and get a razor before it is too late.

New England Should Demand Her Rights

A Little Questionnaire Showing How New York Has Put Things Over on Us in the Railroads

Our active and independent Commissioner on the Necessaries of Life, Mr. Eugene Hultman, calls public attention to the fact that we New Englanders are obliged to pay more for gasoline than the people of any other section of the country.

We shall sputter and scold and protest, pass resolutions and make motions, agitate the air, perhaps even call public meetings, fire off a few blank cartridges, and then—subside with patient resolution.

Why? Clearly because we have learned to do so, and we have formed the habit.

It was New England money that built the New England railroads. They are New England people who own them. They are New England people who have watched them decline into bankruptcy upon their hands. Who has profited by them? New Yorkers. Where are the beautiful stations? In New York. Where are the dirty, filthy stations? In Boston. Which station has the greatest use? The Boston station.

Based upon the number of passengers using the station, which should be the greatest? The South Station in Boston. We believe that more people use it than use New York's two beautiful stations put together—the Pennsylvania and the Grand Central.

At which end are the New England railroads electrified—at the New England end? No, on the New York end, of course. Not a dirty, soot-vomiting engine rolls into New York. Clear to New Haven it is electrified. Whose money has electrified it? New England money—Massachusetts money.

Can New Englanders who live in the suburbs of Boston pass from their homes to their work in the city in clean clothes, and with fresh air in the train during the Summer period? No. Can New Yorkers? Yes. Why? Because New York compelled the New York railroads to electrify, and New England and Massachusetts money was spent to do it.

Who have made great fortunes out of the wrecking of the New England railroads? New York stock gamblers and speculative banking houses.

We had two beautiful boats—the Harvard and the Yale—passing between here and New York, built by New England money and operated by New England money. Where are they now? On the Pacific Coast. Why are they there? Because New York banker management wanted to take away from us the enjoyment of that splendid service, in order to force us to use the railroad which they were milking. Today, we have little steamers, one-half large enough, to take the traffic from Boston to New York, and the Bostonian who wants to go to or come from New York has to make application a week or two in advance for a berth on one of these steamers, or he has to travel on a railroad part of the way.

Non-New England and anti-New England management of New England properties has not only caused the prudent people of New England to lose millions in the value of their railroad investments, but it has caused all the people of New England to lose many more millions in value to New England of the great automobile industry which ought to have located here on account of the relative skill of our skilled labor, but which was lost to New England on account of the bad railroad service caused by non-New England private, speculative banker management.

Let us take back our New England railroads under public management, as the Governor's Storrow Committee suggests. Let us add to them a trunk line. Let us not give our New England railroads to a trunk line, but let us give a trunk line to our New England railroads.

The rest of the country believes that New England constantly exploits it and would be amazed to know how New England is exploited. They think in terms of the tariff and the over-reaching by New England tariff barons. Let us appease the rest of the country by no longer insisting upon unfair tariff schedules. Let us ask of New England mills only what they actually need without business inefficiency. Then let us demand from the country, for the rest of New England, New England's rights.

Quarrels and Scenes

There are some people who seem to think it necessary to make scenes.

They think it indispensable and sometimes beneficial to have quarrels once in a while, and that by so doing they can come to better understanding.

Unfortunately there are some women who hold to this view and who carry it out quite consistently.

Sarah Bernhardt said: "Men hate scenes; that is why I always make them in public places. Scenes are essential to the progress of life as are wars to the progress of civilization."

What Sarah said is exactly true, scenes are as necessary as wars. Just about.

And wars are not necessary at all. That they occur is due to the stupidity, blindness and childishness of rulers.

And that scenes occur in the house of love is equally due to the stupidity, blindness and childishness of its occupants.

There is a way to get along without scenes, but to all fools it is a hidden way.

Debates With Oxford

We wonder why the little colleges beat the Oxford debaters and Harvard failed to do so. Was it a different audience or is it because we naturally assume that in contests of brains as well as of brawn Providence fights on the side of the big battalions?

TREASURE LIES IN SYRIA

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Where next will the seeker after ancient treasure pursue his romantic quest?

The answer, it is to be hoped, is Syria. One of Professor Petrie's ablest lieutenants remarked not long ago when coasting along the Syrian seaboard:

"When the excavator can get at the treasure this country holds, discoveries will be made that will put the wealth of ancient Egypt in the shade."

Cure of Criminals

Editor Boston American:

That's an interesting story in the papers about how a blow on the head turned an insane burglar into a model youth. Out of wholesome respect for the truth of the story, please permit me to suggest that I know of a lot of young reprobates in this city, from thieves on up, who sadly need sound cracks on their heads. It might not be amiss to have this treatment included in our city statutes.

JOHN CARMICHAEL.

Mortal Man's Conceit

Editor Boston American:

Oh, the conceit, the false pride of mortal man! For instance those who, in their bachelor days, insist they would not push a baby carriage. Let any one of those same fourflushers eventually be a daddy and watch the awakening. Nine out of ten of them will have the idea they are exhibiting future Presidents and return after their initial trips with every button busted right off their vests.

AMERICAN LABOR IS SAFE FROM SCARLET FEVER

By Herbert Kaufman

THE Federation of Labor, in convention assembled at Portland, Oregon, wraps its faiths in the Star Spangled Banner and its hopes in the Constitution of the United States.

The few red threads of shoddy, which in recent years have penetrated its sound warp of union citizenship, are officially condemned and discarded by a decision so overwhelmingly—so resounding—that it must rattle certain windows in expectant Moscow. Organized labor's patriotism is still all-wool and country-wide.

Loyal workers repudiate Judas confreres, and stand committed to the codes and roads of Lincoln and Washington.

Voting in blocks, Gompers' men rally around their great leader and by a vote of 27,833 to 50 impeach William F. Dunne, Communist augur-head, of Silver Bow Council, revoke his credentials and expel him from the hall.

A four-hour thorough discussion of the radical situation preceded the dramatic event.

Dunne, disciple of W. Z. Foster, is thus prevented from further boring-in operations. Michigan will later attempt his conviction for violation of the anti-syndicalism act.

Swapping Old Lamps for New

Federation denouncement, however, does not promise to end his saturnine career.

We shall doubtless hear anon from the gentleman. No one reading his brilliant, if perverted, attack upon present constituted authority, can hold him cheaply.

The international chooses its conspirators with shrewd judgment.

Conservatism may well cry warning against the calibre of Sovietism's local group leaders, even though alarm, as just shown, has exaggerated the extent of their influence.

Prosperity, high wages and the steady advance of democracy, contrasted with the inferior individual and national estate prevailing in the foreign radical centres, are, as yet, insuperable obstacles to redying of our flag.

Dunne's theatrical adieu, "I will meet you at the barricades," is hardly likely to pass into history.

Beggars Can't Be Choosers

Mr. Gompers, at this writing, hasn't expressed an opinion on the attempt of Stinnes to protract working hours in the Ruhr.

Boundary lines disappear when labor's hard won, short schedule is anywhere threatened.

With tasks universally syncronized, we require less protection against lower foreign wages.

But the critical position of Germany and years of economic penitence will be indefinitely protracted, if employes don't assist industry to the extent of their powers in ridding the Reich of its inescapeable incubus.

Beggars can't be choosers of time or place

Figuring demanded extra hours at prevailing market values, Germany can meet reasonable indemnities within a generation.

Without such concessions the great enterprises upon whose earnings reparations satisfaction hangs face the trials of Sisyphus.

Stinnes Pulls the Strings

Unless legislation is passed compelling this much cooperation from their men the magnates will undertake to prevent granting of dictatorial powers to Stresemann, who receives a ten-point ultimatum mainly covering questions of taxation and transportation.

Reading of the pre-emptory document discloses plain intent to deliver capital from government control.

If Stresemann yields his Socialist supporters will bolt.

If the chancellor refuses to dance as directed, Stinnes will cut strings and haggle directly with France.

The various strings with which flagless finance expected to jerk the U. S. Debt Funding Commission into Wall Street, weren't strong enough.

Publication of Woodrow Wilson's views against substituting America's pockets for Germany's by forgiving allied loans and the commission's announcement that there will be no cancellation now or ever—in part or in entirety—should make liberty and victory bond quotations jump with assurance.

Baffling news, though, for red-button wearers. They didn't deliver the goods.

Thorns on the Road of Progress

Chemists are always alarmed lest the accidental explosion of an atom sets off the whole energy magazine and finishes creation in a puff of vapor.

The chief of the New York Fire-Prevention Bureau indicates that the city may some day be blown to pieces by the fulmination of volatile oils mixed with air. The metropolis is crowded with wheeled volcanoes capable of worse havoc than Japan has just suffered.

Science is reputed to possess secret rays which melt plane parts like butter in a hot saucepan.

The next cheerful wireless discovery may be invisible forces to pierce and ignite gasoline tanks.

Important communities remain exposed to dire menace while storage or manufacture of highly inflammable substances is promiscuously allowed.

Two tons of nitro-cellulose are daily consumed by Manhattan factories which should be sequestrated in outlying suburbs.

A word to wise insurance men!

Not Under Solomon's Sun

But municipal carelessness is an old story.

Here are some cases:

Detective, raiding a Chinese opium joint, send an urchin ahead to stuff a sentinel parrot with crackers. Polly, drowsy from overeating, fails to cry out, and a den full of pipe-hitters is caught dead to rights.

Uncharted islands are observed off Spitsbergen. No sooner does one buy the latest geography or encyclopedia than something like this happens to obsolesce it.

Geologists tell us that coral insects and submarine boil-overs will keep introducing sudden areas to the map.

An English baby plane, costing less than a thousand dollars to build, flies for seventy-one miles on a single gallon of petrol. Under quantity production, similar sky-carts should be turned out as cheaply as Fords.

Nearer, ever nearer and nearer!

Pasteur institute experiments conclusively trace tuberculosis to bad teeth. Great ills from little cavities grow.

Longevity is fast drifting toward the dentist's chair.

Ten million lepers, hideously and once mortally diseased outcasts, may take heart at dispatches from Java, claiming curative properties for iinal, another coal tar derivative.

The planting of chaulmoogra trees is suspended in consequence of its miraculous results. Time and test tubes will conquer cancer, too.

Plenty of gold left under the rainbow.

Has Woman's Overcoat

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of anybody wanting a woman's overcoat. I also have a fur piece and several other things which I will be glad to give to some needy woman.

MRS. C. S.

Thank you. You will be sent the address of some woman who will be grateful for the articles you offer.

Gives Baby Clothing

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please forward me the address of Mrs. B. H. B, as I would like to send her a few articles of baby clothing. I am interested in her, as I had a child who also had a tubercular spine, but he is in Heaven now.

L. C. T.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. B. H. B and she will be very grateful for your sympathy and assistance.

Mrs. R. J. R. Thankful

Editor Helping Hand:

I wish to express my thanks to you and to those kind people that are so thoughtful of the poor. I received answers from all the addresses you sent me, excepting one or two, and those people have certainly brought sunshine to my home. I also received many dear letters that filled my heart with joy. I surely never can forget the Boston American's Helping Hand column, and I hope some day I will be able to help you for the poor people. I think it wonderful of you to think of them.

MRS. R. J. R.

Wants Clothes for Tots

Editor Helping Hand:

I would like to know if you could send me a suit for a boy of nine, shoes for a girl of 14, and a coat for a girl of 14, also some clothes for an expected baby. We cannot afford to buy anything at all, for we just barely have enough to live on, and we try to be thankful for that. So, if some kind reader can please help us out, we will be very grateful and hope some day to help some one else. Hoping to hear from you and wishing success to the Helping Hand.

MRS. R. C.

Makes Tobacco Offer

Editor Helping Hand:

My wife has contributed through your Helping Hand column lately and I would like to do a little myself. I would give a dollar's worth or two dollars' worth of smoking tobacco to any poor man that has a hard time to raise a big family, or to an old man unable to work. Believe me, the Helping Hand is doing a lot of good and I am glad to be able to do a little bit of help myself.

A. J. P.

Many, many thanks for your generous offer, A. J. P., and the mood will that inspired it. The visit of Lady Nicotine which you make possible will bring soothing comfort to some poor man.

Man of 80 in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

Can anyone help a poor man who is almost eighty years old and almost blind? He is given a room by the city, but they are unable to get him clothes. Anything in the line of clothing would be appreciated. The sizes are overcoat, 40; shirts, 15; shoes, 8. Anything else which anybody may give would be greatly appreciated.

MRS. F. M.

Little Girl's Appeal

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a girl of fourteen and am badly in need of clothing. My mother has three children, a boy of fifteen, my sister, ten years old, and myself. I would very much appreciate any kind of clothing and shoes, especially a Winter coat. My brother needs a suit and my sister a dress and shoes. My father has been sick for four months from heart trouble. We have a pile of doctor's bills. If anybody has some old books they don't need we would appreciate them.

M. L.

Plea for Girl of 13

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing these few lines to see if any of your kind readers could help us. If they could it would be very much appreciated. I have a sister nine years old and a brother eight years. Both wear size 11 shoes, which they need very much. The boy also needs a suit and the girl needs dresses for the Winter. I am thirteen and I would like a pair of shoes, size 3½. Anything at all would help, because my mother could make things over for the small ones. There are seven children in my family, but if you could help the ones I have asked for it would be very much appreciated, as my father is not working and I really don't know finds it very hard as Winter comes on.

M. H.

Girl Asks for Aid

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing to see if some of your kind readers would like to help me, a poor girl. My father has been sick for more than a year and we have nine in our family and I am nearly without clothes. I have no underclothes and it is getting cold. Would be glad to have anything, as my mother can make over clothes. I am thirteen years old, but am very big for my age, for I take size 38 and a shoe, size 6.

O. B. S.

Offers Child's Bed

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a child's white iron bed and mattress which may be had by calling at my address.

MRS. G. S. H.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. E. S, who will greatly appreciate your generosity.

Gives Dollar to Mrs. M. G.

Editor Helping Hand:

Please find enclosed one dollar, which kindly send to Mrs. M. G. May she get many more!

Many thanks for your contribution which will help a lot.

Woman Wants Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I have read so much of your good work I wonder if I, too, couldn't find some one who would help me a little. I am unable to work just now. Seven weeks ago I fell down stairs and broke my arm. I was in bed six weeks and just now am beginning to get up. I can't use my arm any, and so I can't work to get the things I need. Any clothes will be very welcome, size 36. If anyone has a Winter coat I would be so glad to have it, if they are through with it, also any dresses. Hope somebody will be able to help me.

E. T.

Sick More Than a Year

Editor Helping Hand:

I wonder if there is anyone who can help me. I have been sick for more than a year and am just able to get out again. I have a boy nineteen who is badly in need of an overcoat, size 38; a boy twelve, who could use most anything; a girl seventeen, who wears size 36, and myself. I would be very glad to get some kind of dress, size 42 or 50. We would be glad to get anything at all in the line of clothes. It takes every cent I get to pay the rent and the bills.

How Satan at Last Won the Soul of the Good-Bad Girl

How Science, Religion and Humanity Have Abandoned Seraphic Bernice to Her Weird Twin-Self, Demoniacal "Polly"

A Remarkable Combination Photo, Showing How Bernice Redick's Expression Changes When She Undergoes the Transformation from Her Natural Self to That of Her Evil Genius, "Polly." (Place a Card Over Each Side of the Face, Alternately, and See the Amazing Result.

THAT scarlet demon of the modern mind — double personality — has won a baffling victory over the combined forces of will power and science. Its latest piteous victim is attractive Bernice Redick, for whose soul psychic specialists wrestled for two years—in vain!

Little Miss Redick has been committed to the Ohio State Hospital for the Insane by the Franklin County Juvenile Court. Note that word "juvenile," for thereby hangs a tale which almost outstrips Robert Louis Stevenson's weird fantasy, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and which makes Edward Locke's gruesome "The Case of Becky" sound like a nursery story.

Never in the annals of American scientific research has a more vigorous contest been waged to banish a haunting, intruding ego from a brain, at its best, superior. In some way—pathologists do not pretend to know precisely how—a bad, four-year-old spirit forced itself into Miss Redick's mentality, finally ousting her good, twenty-year-old consciousness, perhaps forever.

And rarely, say specialists, has a girl put up a braver losing fight to regain her normal poise than did pretty Bernice.

Within the well-shaped head, clouded with soft curls, dwell two beings. One is the real Bernice, an amiable, refined, dreamy-eyed young woman—intelligent, soft of voice, appealing and popular. Her conduct has always been propriety incarnate; her individuality charming, and her intelligence as sharp as a Florentine dagger.

But there are times—and sad, multiplying times, too— when, though Bernice's body lives and thrives, her spirit flees, terrified by the uncanny invader, "Polly." "Polly," with the madcap whims and annoying selfishness of an overgrown baby, insists upon taking up her abode in that fine, shapely head. And when she does so, shocking things occur.

Not shocking, perhaps, in the conventional sense of outraged morality, but harmful to the true Bernice and painful for humanitarians to witness—a wild, mean little creature preempting the figure and face, and dictating the actions, of one far better than she.

Bernice is a high school graduate, with a passionate devotion to the arts. Especially does she love music, and she has often sat, entranced and adoring, when an orchestra or talking machine played an overture of Tschaikowsky, a snatch of Grieg, or an excerpt from a Wagnerian opera. She wants, or wanted, to study harmony and counterpoint. She wanted to be a great pianiste, a second Teresa Carreno or Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler. But——

"Polly" wouldn't have it so. "Polly," tricking, scratching, destructive, malicious "Polly" hated her rival, loathed her rival's fine mind, even denied, once, her rival's existence. For "Polly" could neither read nor write. She was, indeed, so backward that she couldn't tell red from green, or purple from brown, though she liked brilliant hues, just as a savage does.

"Polly," defiant and raucous, sat on the floor, yelling for "my dollies;" called the physicians and nurses by foolish "baby talk" names; couldn't count above ten.

Then, suddenly, with the dramatic flash of a movie "cutback," Bernice would reappear, and all would be well—temporarily. "How can such things happen!" the puzzled reader may well exclaim. And the simplest "explanation" — though science has arrived at no final, clinching conclusion—is to begin with Bernice as a real child, before the furious phantom of "Polly" had attacked her.

Her home was the town of Lisbon, Ohio, where her father was a well-known and prosperous accountant. Bernice was happy there, she sighs, with her devoted parents. But, although she was gay and generous to the other children in the family, doubtless she wished, now and then, that her twin sister, a frail baby, had not died in infancy.

Certain scientists, to-day, think that it is the "pulsating consciousness," the left-over soul, of that dead twin which has created "Polly" and crammed her into the Bernice-mind. Whether that be true or not, the fact remains that worse experiences than the mere longing for her sister lay in cruel ambush for Bernice.

One of them was when a nurse, too eager to instill bravery into the youngster, made her enter a dark room, alone. The woman meant well, but her charge cringed, shuddered and, after she had gone in, collapsed. Another more terrible ordeal was when the elder Redicks died, leaving poor Bernice to realize that most of us must work—or starve.

In Cleveland she got a clerical job, supporting herself and the other children. She did well, so well that she began to pile high the bonfire of hope that some day the cherished musical career might come true. Then—the crash, and the pity, of it all. Chatting animatedly with a friend about a concert they had attended, Bernice fell into sudden, alarming slumber.

When she awoke, she had shed fifteen years, slipped back into the thought-process of an unruly, angry, unappealing "Polly," putting Bernice to flight!

Those who knew Bernice were panic-stricken. They didn't understand how a sweet-tempered, clever girl could, in a few flying seconds, be wiped out and a tiny fiend take her place. So they consulted specialists, among them Dr. Oscar Thomas, a Cleveland practitioner of excellent standing. Dr. Thomas, learning that Bernice had had a twin sister, sensed a psychic knot of tangled personality-threads. He examined Bernice and sent her to Columbus, where there were greater facilities for handling such involved cases.

Bernice-"Polly" was taken in hand by an eminent alienist, Dr. Henry Herbert Goddard, head of the Ohio Bureau for Juvenile Research. He and his assistants tried every known method of "dissecting" the evil genius, of frightening her away from her prey. And, for a time, their pride and joy leaped up, as they saw "Polly" relax her grip on the victim.

They applied Binet tests; mesmerized the Jekyll Hyde girl, actually made "Polly" "grow up" for the moment. Eleven times the transformation back and forth was effected before their very eyes. "Polly, while stubborn and wild, was not dull. She learned to read. She went to kindergarten. She even drew pictures—daubs and scratches, but not meaningless.

One day they asked "Polly" how old she was. Before that, she had always snapped back "Four years old, of course!"

A Camera Study of Dainty Bernice, Taken Before the Fatal Spell of "Polly" Was Cast Over Her Life.

Bernice As She Appears When "Polly" Is in Control of Her Mind, Forcing Her to Act Like a Four-Year-Old.

This time she admitted being eleven. She "grew" thus through girlhood until, on her fifteenth "birthday," a party, with cake and candles, symbolized Dr. Goddard's triumph over the Satanic forces which had so sapped Bernice's soul.

It was a great, a superb moment for science and those warm, deep hearts that had so agonized over Bernice-"Polly." But it was short-lived and bitterly disappointing in its last analysis.

From her lofty peak of self-command, "Polly" fell, a girl-Lucifer, plunging from the heights she had so laboriously and painfully scaled. Swiftly, surely, maddeningly, Bernice became less and less herself, while "Polly," her temper roused, her control routed, grew worse and worse. Recently her sharp tongue and impish pranks began seriously to annoy the routine of the institution.

Complaints were made, and, despite desperate efforts to save Bernice from a humiliation due to the malevolent "Polly" alone, the strange composite young woman, half-angel, half-devil, was committed to the hospital for the insane. There she must try to fight her bitter battle all over again. The outcome no one—not even learned experts—knows.

But those who saw Bernice-"Polly" taken away to that place of grim doors and hushed footsteps knew that her last despairing words, spoken with Bernice's lips, were, "WHY must my life be darkened by this terrible affliction?"

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A LOT of men have become so crazy about golf lately that they're wearing their knickerbockers to work. When you see a guy in his office today you can't tell whether he's the general manager or an office boy.

IF the telephone operator says the president of the firm is in conference, the chances are he's in the directors' room learning how to putt.

A GREEN dash blotter makes a wonderful fairway and you wouldn't want a better tee than an ink-well.

SOME business men are so proficient that they can play golf with one hand and answer the telephone with the other.

ONE guy was so enthusiastic over his practising that he took the receiver off the hook and hollered "Fore" into the mouthpiece.

TWO days later this bird tried to sign a check with a niblick.

ONE stenographer said that her boss wasn't attending to business. He was playing golf all the time instead of petting her.

A LOT of executives are so interested in golf that they only take two or three hours for lunch.

THEY want to hurry back to the office so that they can practice some new shots.

WHEN they want to make their indoor gains good and hard they put five or six filters around the room and use them for water hazards.

AND whenever one of them gets broken, the chief clerk doesn't mention it to the boss so he blames it on the office boy.

SO if your employer doesn't accomplish much work at the office, don't worry. The chances are he does plenty of digging out on the golf course.

ADDING EXCITEMENT TO LIFE DOES NOT CURE FATIGUE.

You feel tired and worn out—fagged—and you try to convince yourself that you need amusement and entertainment when, as a matter of fact, you need sleep.

You deny what nature demands. Adding excitement to your life will not rid you of weariness.

Excitement is not medicine, nor a real, quick relief.

It ought to be more agreeable to you to get some sweet, wholesome rest in the quiet of your own room, feeling well at the same time, rather than to bring upon yourself the aches and pains which are bound to be yours, when you do have to lie on your back, because you would not rest and sleep enough otherwise.

Why not be distinguished for your good common sense in such matters?
